SOME find happiness in the misery of others. Crowds gathered to see punished traitors. In Queen Elizabeth's day, miserable creatures who were hanged by the neck, cut down living and submitted to shameful, indescribable mutilation.

Cotton Mather told his flock that in Heaven the blessed were made more blissful by permission to look into Hell, and see friends, neighbors and relatives writhing in the fire.

We have improved morally but even now, in Florida, California, or on the French Riviera, men like to read about cold weather elsewhere. Yesterday they could read of 38 degrees below zero in Utah, where sheep died in flocks, frozen stiff, farmers unable to reach them.

When we realize that "absolute zero," a temperature hundreds of degrees below zero, exists throughout space, just outside of our thin atmosphere, only 500 miles deep, and that heat inconceivable is just below our feet, we should be grateful.

Nothing is more marvelous than nature's regulation of the earth's temperature, except the regulation of our bodily heat, varying not even ONE degree on the equator or at the North Pole.

We are fearfully and wonderfully made and so is our old earth. Those that do not praise the Lord are ungrateful.

It is important to have tools, more important to understand using them. China about to dismiss 1,000,000 men from her various armies, wondering how to pay them back wages, and employ them at work better for the country than brigandage.

China keeps an army of 800,000 men, biggest in the world. Japan or any nation that understands war, with 200,000 as many men, could conquer the Chinese army. That is no reflection on Chinese courage, which equals that of any nation. It is a matter of military science.

Hence the importance of developing military specialists here, enlarging West Point and Annapolis, and employing in public works engineers produced by military schools. The Panama Canal proves the constructive capacity of our army. The navy is as good.

Modern war is chiefly engineering. The dashing commander of a cavalry regiment would be replaced by a man like Lindbergh or Rickenbacker leading an airplane flotilla. Another Napoleon would need, first of all, a force of chemists.

Napoleon could not have imagined that, when, in Egypt, having brought many scientists from France, he ordered: "Donkeys and scientists in the center" when the fighting began, wishing to protect science and baggage.

Paris says women, this summer, will wear skirts as short as ever, but "less on their backs."

The day when ladies startled the opera by uncovering half of the spine has gone by. "All of the spine is beautiful," says the modern dressmaker. Quite true, if you don't include in the spine the little curled ostrich feather, all that is left, says science, of what used to be a tail.

President Lowell of Harvard deplores prohibition's results, likening them to the evils of reconstruction days. He recalls that when the evils of reconstruction became plain, President Hayes wisely decided to "withdraw those laws, although to enforce them was his clear constitutional obligation."

Dealing with thousands of young men under prohibition, Dr. Lowell's opinions must be respected by the most ardent prohibition enthusiast. Dr. Lowell calls the present enforcement of the law "vexatious, demoralizing and inefficient." He says in his Atlantic Monthly article, "As every one knows, the law is not enforced, and as time goes on it seems to be less and less effective."

Such men as Dr. Lowell of Harvard; Dr. Abbott, able educator at the head of Lawrenceville School, and others that know prohibition's effects on boys and young men, should be consulted on laws that affect the rising generation.

W. R. Hearst, who offers $25,000 for the best plan to establish true temperance and discourage bootlegging and crime born of bootlegging, might obtain valuable suggestions from educators generally, from heads of universities to high school principals.

Death Victim

MRS. CORA J. CULLEN

Was Bride Slain in Auto?

WAS MRS. CORA CULLEN seated in an automobile when she was shot and killed? Or was she making a frantic effort to flee from the car?

Was she first shot in the neck and then through the back as wounded, she tried to run? Or was she felled first with the bullet through her back and then, as she lay on the ground, face up, looking into her slayer's eyes, riddled with the shots through her neck?

Dr. Timothy Leary, Boston medical examiner, after an autopsy, will answer these important questions, on which the police differ.

Leads Man Hunt

CAPT. CHARLES BEAUPRE

Watch All Roads for Cullen

CAPT. CHARLES BEAUPRE of the State Police distributed all available men of the uniformed constabulary force on motorcycles on all the main and many less frequented highways to watch day and night for Christopher Cullen, husband of the bride slain at Hingham.

Every state trooper has been ordered to commit to memory a full description of Cullen and his auto, a green Chevrolet, 1928 coach, with one door on each side, and bearing registration plates numbered 405107.

All local police departments have been provided with descriptions and asked to aid in the hunt.

DR. TIMOTHY LEARY

Tells How Cullen Got Gun

INFORMATION supplied by Eugene Hutchinson of Grant st., Weymouth, electrified the police working on the Cullen murder case and spurred them to concentrate on finding Christopher Cullen. Hutchinson declared:

That Cullen, whose five-day bride was slain, bought a .22 calibre repeating rifle from him less than six hours before Cora Cullen was killed with bullets of the same size.

And that Cullen left a run-down battery, and had a fully-charged rental battery placed in his car.

COOLIDGE APPOINTS GOW HUB POSTMASTER

President Coolidge today sent to the Senate the nomination of Charles R. Gow of Brookline as postmaster of Boston.

Gow was the leader on the eligible list certified by the Civil Service Commission. His rating was 89.20 percent. Postmaster Roland M. Baker, second on the list, had a rating of 82.20, while Herman Hormel, third, received 72.

Gow was recommended to Coolidge for the post by Republican National Committeeman Liggett. His application was filed with the Civil Service Commission by Senator Gillette.

Gow, who will succeed Roland M. Baker as postmaster, is a teacher of "humanics" at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and has long been considered one of the city's foremost engineers. He has an office in the Park Sq. Building. He was born in Medford 56 years ago. By former Gov. Fuller he was recently appointed a

LYNN LAUNDRY OWNER KILLS SELF WITH RIFLE

William Dodge, 56, one of the owners of a Lynn laundry, blew the top of his head off with a 44 calibre rifle in a small room in the office of the laundry on Mulberry st., Lynn, today.

After his body was removed, his sister, Mrs. Margaret Kenney, also part owner of the laundry, had the room nailed up. She explained her action by saying she believed Dodge had several thousand dollars hidden there and she did not want to give anyone a chance to steal the money.

Dr. Nathaniel P. Reed, medical examiner, officially pronounced the case one of suicide. The police said Dodge evidently put the muzzle of the rifle under his chin and so manipulated the weapon that it was discharged.

STRANGE MOTORIST CHASED NEAR SCENE OF HINGHAM MURDER

A furtive motorist, believed by police to be Christopher Cullen, missing husband of Cora Cullen, who was brutally slain near "Lover's lane," Hingham, five days after her wedding, was seen and chased today a mile from the scene of the murder by a Hingham girl.

Although this caused no let-down in the search for Cullen that is being conducted far and wide, the authorities immediately despatched a force of state troopers to scour the South Shore anew for Cullen.

Indication that he was still in the vicinity came as a distinct surprise and greatly intensified the hunt in and around Greater Boston.

Hunt for a mystery woman in gray, who was seen with Cullen in East Weymouth last Thursday afternoon, the day before the shooting, while he was still supposedly honeymooning happily with his bride, was also launched today.

The story of an old love affair between him and a Hingham woman came to light in this connection and assumed an important place in the investigation.

HINGHAM GIRL CHASES MYSTERY AUTO NEAR SCENE OF SLAYING

WOMAN IN GRAY SEEN WITH CULLEN IN WEYMOUTH

Police went to the honeymoon house on Raymond st. and examined all letters and papers that could be found, but this angle of the probe was fruitless.

They hoped, but failed, to establish thus a definite motive which, Police Chief Harold MacFarlane of Hingham said today, is "absolutely lacking."

The strangely-acting motorist was seen by Miss Arlie Vaniken, 20, of Cushing st., Hingham, and also by her father and brother, whom she was driving to an early train at the East Weymouth station.

She saw a car suddenly emerge from the woods off Ward st., just as she turned into the road, and the driver of this automobile, which was exactly like Cullen's car, sped rapidly away in utter disregard of the dangerous ice-coated highway.

Girl Pursued Mystery Auto, But It Was Too Fast

Miss Vaniken knew of the search for Cullen in connection with the murder and knew that his car was just like her own.

Thought of Cullen flashed into her mind as soon as she saw the driver come out of the wooded section. The car lights were out, although it was still only half light out and Miss Vaniken had the lights of her car turned on.

Swinging on to Ward st., the driver switched on his lights He wore a light cap, according to the girl driver and her passengers. Cullen left home wearing a brown cap.

The driver seemed to slump in his seat and the impression that the Vanikens received was that he was trying to evade detection. Stepping on the throttle, the girl gave chase and tried her best to overtake the other automobile and at least get the registration number, to see if it was Cullen's, but she could not gain ground and eventually had to give up.

Investigators, receiving her report, thought it highly possible that Cullen may have hidden his car in the woods and returned to get it before daylight today, or may have slept in it there.

The wooded section from which the car emerged has a cowpath leading in to it, but this path does not run through to any other highway. A general search was made in that locality Sunday for an abandoned car, but none was found.

James Maloney of Weymouth, who knows Cullen well, reported seeing him with the mysterious "woman in gray" who now figures in the case and who, police judge, may be the "key" to finding the missing bridegroom.

Maloney, a high school boy of 17, living on Broad st., said he waved and shouted a greeting to Cullen and received a salute in return. Cullen was seated behind the wheel of his car on Cottage st. at the side of the Weymouth Trust Company building, and the unidentified woman was stepping into the machine.

As he passed in a truck which he was driving the boy did not get a good look at the woman.

Search Cornfield for Missing Death Weapon

Another important phase of the investigation today was search through the snow-clad woodland around "Lover's Lane" for the murder weapon, a .22-calibre rifle, which it has now been established, according to the police, Cullen bought from Eugene Hutchinson of Weymouth at 9 o'clock last Friday morning.

Police are also making a check-up to determine what the murdered bride has done with savings of $2000 which she had just before her marriage a week ago yesterday.

When Cullen started out from East Weymouth for Lowell Friday morning at 10:15 with his bride beside him, she wore a black coat which was on her body when it was found in the woods Saturday afternoon. This, together with information supplied by Cullen's sisters, eliminates her as the woman seen by Maloney with Cullen at the bank.

The "ride to Lowell," where Cora Cullen's family lived, ended less than 45 minutes after the departure from East Weymouth. Police had determined that she was killed before 11 o'clock in the neighboring town of Hingham.

Information relating to the $2000 savings of the slain bride came to the investigators today from friends who described her as a thrifty worker who made good money and methodically saved a large part of it.

Find Abandoned Ford in Search for Cullen Car

Lowell police were today endeavoring to connect with Christopher Cullen's disappearance the finding of an abandoned Ford sedan on Payton st., Lowell, near the Harvard brewery.

The sedan's registration plates were missing.

The authorities thought it possible Cullen might have stolen the Ford, driven it to a quiet spot, and taken its plates to disguise his own car.

No sedan of the type which was found had been reported missing about Lowell.

Her intimate friends quoted her as having said she would keep possession of this sum until "after her wedding."

Jealousy Suggested as Possible Motive

Sudden jealousy is one of the theories upon which the authorities are working, although nothing has been uncovered to support this theory, according to Chief MacFarlane.

"Even though such a theory is tenable, it is extremely doubtful to anyone who knew that young woman and knew wher regard for Chris Cullen," said the police head, "I knew her when I used to live at the Cushing House, where she worked at one time, and she thought highly of the man she married.

"Of course, it is possible that another man entered her life after she left Nantasket but fail to spend the intervening months before her marriage in Lowell.

"Another matter for speculation is the problem of the actual shooting. It appears to me that Mrs. Cullen must have realized as she was driven into that deserted section that something was going to happen.

"Let us say she saw a rifle in the car and with a scream started to get out and run. Then came the shot in the back, for I am convinced that shot was the one first fired.

"This supposition forces the conclusion that the other shots were fired deliberately into her as she lay face upon the ground in that open field, which no one within a mile or so to hear her appeals for help, except the fiend who was killing her.

"But why was the body left in the open? Did the murderer get panic-stricken at last, after firing five shots? There are plenty of woods around in which to conceal a body for a time.

No Bank Account

"Now, on the bank account angle—we checked up reports that Cullen drew all his money out of some bank in Hingham or Weymouth last Friday, and we cannot find that he had an account in any bank in these two towns.

"We are looking for an account elsewhere. He had a Christmas club account in the Weymouth Savings Bank some time ago, but that was closed out long ago. Perhaps he had money in bank in Boston.

"The couple had money because they had to furnish their new home. Incidentally the interest that Cullen took in that house is a puzzling feature of the case. He and his wife spent all their time there in the few days following their marriage, and Cullen did all sorts of jobs fixing the place up, laying linoleum and so on, and had ordered a dining room set to be delivered this week. She was highly interested in the house, too

"The last thing Mrs Cullen did before she left East Weymouth Friday to go to her death was to ask a neighbor to keep the fire up till she and her husband returned. They were going after their wedding presents, left in Lowell, by the way."

Scraping of snow off the meadow near "Lover's Lane" in Hingham revealed no sign of the murder weapon, but uncovered automobile tracks in the frozen ground.

Out of the inquiry being made at Lowell came information to the authorities as Hingham that an attractive Hingham woman caused an estrangement between Cullen and his bride-to-be a few months before their marriage. State Detective Brouillard and Capt. MacFarlane will bend their efforts today to locating this woman.

PARTED LAST FALL

For several weeks preceding Christmas the Jacques girl worked in the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Furmoyle of South Billerica. The Furmoyles said that Mrs. Cullen freely discussed her friendship with Cullen for some months before their marriage. According to the Furmoyle family the girl had told them in the early fall that she and Cullen had broken off friendship with one another as a result of attentions he was paying to a married woman in Hingham.

SOUGHT

Christopher Cullen is being sought by the police for questioning in his bride's death.

Cullen and Miss Jacques before this had purchased considerable furniture and were making plans for their marriage at some date in the future.

The parting between the couple took place in the early fall in an automobile in front of the girl's house, 38 Starbird st., Pawtucketville, on the outskirts of Lowell, according to Mrs. Furmoyle, who said the girl related the facts to her during the time she was employed there.

Mrs. Furmoyle said that the Jacques girl told her that he couldn't marry her. He gave as his reason that he was in ill health. According to Mrs. Furmoyle the girl told her she didn't accept this explanation, but attributed his [illegible] to cancel their intended marriage to the fact that he was fond of the married woman in Hingham.

RECONCILED LATER

A reconciliation was effected between the couple, however, on Christmas Day, according to Mrs. Furmoyle. Cullen gave her a small engagement ring that day. The marriage which subsequently took place was hastily planned, according to Mrs. Furmoyle. They were called in St. Rita's for the first time the following Sunday, and a week ago yesterday, the third Sunday, the bans of marriage were announced, the couple were married.

The bride, according to Mrs. Furmoyle, entertained the hope that she could open up a small inn after her marriage. She worked before her employment at the Furmoyle's for Dr. S. Marshall Billerica Center. She was also employed for a time at Wellesley College.

BUYS RIFLE

Discovery that Cullen bought a .22-caliber Winchester repeating rifle from Eugene Hutchinson of Grant st., East Weymouth, last Friday morning at 9 o'clock, and that he put a fully-charged service battery in his car, was made by the police soon after they had sent broadcast a description of the missing bridegroom.

Hutchinson, who operates a battery service station on Grant st., said he had known Cullen for a long time.

"He drove up and left his car battery here and I put a rental one in for him," said Hutchinson "It was 9 o'clock Friday morning.

"While he was in my shop he noticed the .22-caliber rifle, a Winchester repeater, standing in the corner.

"'Gene, will you sell me that gun?' asked Cullen.

"'What do you want that gun for?' I asked him.

"'To shoot a rat up at my house,' he said.

"So I sold him the gun for $2 down and $12 more to be paid Saturday. Cullen put the rifle in his car and drove away."

COUPLE HAPPY

From there the bridegroom drove to the little cottage on Raymond st., East Weymouth, which he and Cora Cullen had just finished furnishing as their future home. Getting her, he stopped next door to wave goodbye to his sisters, exchange a few words, and then he drove away.

That was at 10:15 Friday morning. It started snowing at 11 o'clock and before the first flakes began to fall, Cora Cullen was dead, murdered—slain with .22-calibre "long" bullets of the rifle type.

The police believe that the road known as "Lover's Lane," near which her body was found, was the former trysting place of her and Chris" Cullen during their two-year romance.

Not the faintest sign of any thing but happiness was given by the couple during the few days of their married life, according to his family, members of which saw them day by day, and the impression that both of them left as they drove away Friday morning was one of wedded bliss.

When news of the identification of the murder victim reached them Cullen's sisters were terribly shocked. These women are Miss Mary and Miss Agnes Cullen, who live on Raymond st., and Mrs. Elizabeth O'Connell, who lives upstairs in the same house. They all told virtually the same story of the "happy" bride and groom.

"It is not like him to be in any way mixed in anything like this," said Miss Mary Cullen. "Whether he is or not, I hope he's dead, for it would be better that way. None of us can possibly believe he did have anything to do with it.

"Why there was not the slightest indication of any trouble between him and Cora. It is true that if there had been trouble—if something had been gnawing at his soul—he would have said nothing about it; for he was that kind, never wanting to hurt us in the least. Still, you would think he would have shown it unconsciously in some way.

"He was always very quiet around the house and said very little about his private affairs. With Cora he showed every evidence of complete happiness, and so did she with him. He thought the world of her. You could see that, and she was very much devoted to him.

"We had met her only a few times before the marriage, but we attended the wedding. We decided as soon as we knew they were going to be married that we would take her right into the family, for we surely liked her.

"They took the little five-room house next door, which had been vacant, and made it their home They were going to Lowell Friday and coming right back—just going up to Cora's sister's place for some of her things. After they left I went over and finished putting things in shape in their little home. little thinking any tragedy was coming home to us.

"I never saw such interest taken in a new home as my brother and his bride took in theirs, and it was a great pleasure to help them arrange things there.

"Christopher didn't have a temper and was very quiet and easy to get along with There wasn't any reason for him to do anything like this I cannot believe it. Not of him.

BROTHER PHONES

"They left here before 10:30 about 10:15, I guess, on Friday morning. It wasn't snowing then, but it began a little while afterward. On that account we did not think it strange when they failed to return from Lowell, Friday night, nor on Saturday, either. It appeared to us as if they decided to wait until Sunday, when the roads would be safer. Naturally, her sister would want them to stay a day or two, and Christopher did not have to be back to work until Monday. He had a week's leave.

"He worked at the Metropolitan District Commission garage, on the State reservation, at Nantasket. Last June, to be nearer him, Cora left her work at the Cushing Hotel in Hingham, and went to work in the laundry at the State bathhouse. He had a fine job and was doing well.

"A gun? We never even saw a toy gun here in the house. No, he didn't have a gun

"We were startled when Arthur Jacques called on the phone Sunday morning and told us he thought Cora was killed Agnes answered the telephone. First of all, he said, 'Aren't 'Christy' and Cora coming up here?'

"Agnes said him: 'They left here last Friday.'

"Then Arthur Jacques told of his fear, saying: 'I feel almost

CUNNINGHAM TO FACE WARNER QUIZ TODAY

Edmund P. Cunningham, secretary of the Boston Braves, appeared at the State House today for his long-deferred conference with Atty-Gen. Joseph R. Warner over the collections and expenditures of the Outdoor Recreation League.

Cunningham was listed as a contributor of $250, to the League's fund which is alleged to have been spent to "put over" Sunday baseball.

In his testimony before the finance commission, Cunningham declared he made his contribution in cash and kept no record of it.

Arriving at the attorney-general's office today, Cunningham was immediately ushered into a private chamber for examination by Warner. He was accompanied by his counsel, Atty. Charles A. McCarron who also represented Claude Davidson, president of the Outdoor Recreation League when Davidson appeared before Atty-Gen. Warner.

Cunningham explained his inability to keep previous appointments owing to illness in his family at Wollaston.

Another angle in the case will be furnished today when the City Council meets. Indications are that the council will pass the Sunday baseball ordinance in defiance to Mayor Nichols. The challenge to the mayor will comprise, mainly, during the mayor to veto the new ordinance, which provides for a general admission price of 50 cents to the game and a 10-cent rate for tonics, ice cream and hot dogs as on week days.

Probe Liquor Supply of High School Girls

Baltimore, Jan. 28 (AP)—Following the suspension of three students in the Eastor High School for Girls for alleged intoxication in class last week, Dr. David E. Weglein, superintendent of public instruction, sought today to determine whether liquor can be purchased by students from neighborhood speakeasies.

The girls were suspended after they had caused a general disturbance in class. School officials said they were under the influence of liquor. Search revealed an empty

Police Send Force To Seize Fanatics

Nelson, B. C., Jan. 28 (AP)—War was declared against Doukhobor fanatics in the Grand Forks district by the provincial police today. Inspector Dunwoody sent a force of provincial police to Grand Forks to arrest certain members of the Sons of Freedom sect.

On Friday last the Doukhobors, in frenzied wrath and minus clothing in sub-zero weather, attacked two provincial policemen who want to arrest three of the Doukhobor members. The officers were chased from the territory.

NEAR-ZERO FOR HUB TONIGHT

Near-zero weather tonight and still sharper cold tomorrow was the official forecaster's order today for Boston and its vicinity.

Although the Government thermometer on the Post-office Building showed only a conservative minimum temperature of 16 this early morning, communities surrounding Boston proper reported much lower figures. A brond belt of sub-zero temperatures stretched today from Montana to the Ohio River Valley.

The official guess for Boston's minimum temperature for tonight was 10 above zero—equivalent to zero and lower in the suburbs.

Forecast for Boston and vicinity: Fair and colder tonight. Tuesday, fair and continued cold. Moderate north and northwest winds.

Seeks to Unlock Sacramental Wine

Seattle, Jan. 27 (AP)—New representatives must be elected by three Seattle Jewish congregations for the distribution of their sacramental wine before Jadlowker will be removed from their cellars, Federal Prohibition Administrator Roy C. Lyle informed them in letters today.

'TYPEWRITER KING' IN FIGHT ON DIVORCE

New York, Jan. 28 (INS)—A husband and wife court battle that may rival the Stillman case was promised today with the filing of divorce and counter divorce suits by George Ed Smith, millionaire typewriter king, and his wife Mary. The suing husband charges his wife with 17 acts of misconduct, while she in turn accuses him of infidelity with a "tall slim blonde" whom she names as a Miss Helen C. Meade.

2115 Years Is Total Age of 27 Persons In English Town

Bursledon, Eng., Jan. 28—This sleepy little Hampshire village boasts the distinction of being the "place where nobody is young."

The aggregate age of the inhabitants, in proportion to population, is the highest in Britain. Twenty-seven venerable residents have a total age of 2115 years, or an average of 78.

Condition of King Continues to Improve

London, Jan 28 (AP)—The progress which King George has been making for many days was stated authoritatively today to be unchecked. A setback at this stage was regarded as only a remote possibility.

Sir Hugh Rigby was the only attending doctor to visit the King today.

It was indicated the King would be moved to the seaside resort of Bognor late next week.

Dearest Anne:

Allyn's Gown Shop

41 Winter st.—that charming shop of distinctive, one-of-a-kind frocks is having a special sale, Anne! Good news? Well, I guess! It means that you can buy one of this season's wankiest wool tweeds or gorgeous velvets formerly much, much higher priced, for only $6.95!

Stunning crepes, georgettes, satins, prints and moires, in all the newest colors and styles that have been selling for $16.50 and $24.50 are marked down to only $13.75 Just see the frock sketched—a dashing georgette of flaming Jockey red, with detachable jacket. This is only one of the great bargains. You really must see the rest for yourself—they are marvelous!

A Smart New Hat Shop

CLARKE'S, has just opened up on Tremont St., Anne, at No. 168, right near the corner of Avery. Here at last is an exclusive millinery shop on our favorite promenade. I dropped in at their opening Saturday, and my, what a business they're doing! Small wonder, too, when they have such cleverly-styled, up-to-the-minute hats at such a wide range of prices. Visons and felts —original models—in all the lovely Spring shades are priced at only $5. Stunning genuine imported Ballbuntls at $10 are regular $18 values! There are hundreds of hats ranging in price from $3.50 to $20—every smart style—for every type—in every headsize, too!

The Old Lady

who lived in a shoe—the one with the large family, who didn't know what to do—could quite thriftily solve her problema today, Anne, in the Children's Hosiery Dept. of the Touraine Glove Co., Avon st. store. I am really convinced that this is the best place to buy children's stockings. Just think of a fine quality cotton sport stocking for only 29 cents! Why, it's unbelievable! And yet you can always get them for that price at the Touraine. These long stockings come in camel, blue, black and russet tan plaids, and are very good-looking. The sport socks, with turn-down cuff, are also priced at only 29 cents and come in camel and black plaids.

Anne—Let Me Tell you about the special sale of wonderful silk dresses at Palmer's, 321 Washington St.—for only $6.50! Really, I had to blink twice at the price tags, for I could scarcely believe they could sell these dresses as low as $6.50. But there they are, the most dashing, youthful frocks in the gayest colors and newest styles. Fascinating prints adding a spice of variety to your wardrobe, and high-colored crepes in the new bolero, jacket, and vagabond 'kerchief styles are irresistible values at only $6.50. No need to be dull or shabby-looking with stunning dresses like these so amazingly low priced. Let's drop in there today.

What's New in the Spanish Galleries?

Prints, my Anne! Prints with a shower of confetti! Prints with a flurry of dots! Prints with a modernistic touch and prints with a maze of tumbling, tangled flowers! The very breath of Spring, Anne, laughing out from under sober winter coats. And they are such wonderful values, too! You'll find them all in the $10 Dress Section of the Spanish Galleries of Chandler & Co. Both Aunt Jane and sweet Miss Jean can be fitted here, Anne, at the same price, because these dresses come in sizes 16 to 46. The styles are the very latest—ruffly tiers, tailored two-piece models, kerchief models, and some with the smart new Monk collar. Of course there are some perfectly stunning silk crepe dresses in newest flattering colors, and charming styles. Also some smart georgette cocktail frocks, and frocks with detachable sleeves that are astonishing values at $10. Those quaint little Peasant dresses which have pushed their way to the front come in blue, tan and rose, with gayly-hued embroidery, and are just the thing for business and every day wear. So if you are looking for afternoon, evening, or sport frock, large size or small, you are sure to find just what you want in the $10 Dress Section of the Spanish Galleries.

It's Filene's Stocktaking Sale, Anne!

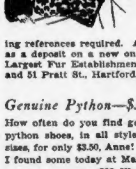
So hurry, hurry—let's get there as early as we can for they are offering the most marvelous values in stockings, and I am sadly in need of a new supply. Such wonderful variety, too! All kinds of hosiery, in all colors, have been unbelievably reduced. I am going to lay in my next season's supply right now. There is an excellent quality service weight of famous make, an exceptional value, at only $1.30. Really, Anne, there is nothing like a fine service weight for every day wear. Fishnets, for which we always paid at least $1.85, are specially offered at only $1.00. What alluring sophistication they lend to the costume. An exceptionally fine quality, full fashioned stocking, with the slenderizing pointed heel, is also a striking value at $1.00. And chiffon stockings, Anne—the love o' my life! I can't resist them, and when they are priced at only $1.00 I don't have to, for Filene's is offering an extraordinary reduction in silk chiffon stockings at only $1.00 They are sheer, cobwebby mists, and come in all colors. So let's be among the first to take advantage of the amazing values offered during Filene's Stocktaking Sale in their Hosiery Dept., street floor.

A Miss of Moderate Means

may now enjoy the delight and comfort of a smart fur coat at an unusually low price—if—she takes advantage of Scott's annual Mark Down sale of their dependable fur coats. Scott's sale is different. It is genuine. It is held only once a year! And at this time you can save from $50 to $200 on your fur coat. Their prices now are $75—$85—$125—$145—$175—$195 and up, according to the furs. And the terms —just ask anyone of the thousands of women all over New England who have bought their coats at Scott's. They'll tell you that they are the most convenient, most liberal terms offered. You may pay cash. You may open a 30-60-90 days' charge account, or, you may join Scott's Unique Fur Club, and make small weekly or monthly payment while wearing your coat. No extra paymenls, or carrying charges are made, and no embarrassing references required. And you may turn in your old fur coat as a deposit on a new one. Scott Furriers, Inc., New England's Largest Fur Establishment, is located at 69 Summer St., Boston, and 51 Pratt St., Hartford, Conn.

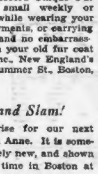
Genuine Python—$3.50!

How often do you find genuine python shoes, in all styles and sizes, for only $3.50, Anne! Well, I found some today at Marvin's, for the first time in Boston at 596 Washington St., and truly, they are called the are breathtaking values. These regularly sell for $12. You really must see them. Marvin's makes a specialty of this $3.50 price—you can buy any kind of a shoe for that amount —even evening slippers. With so many parties going on, now, you surely will want a pair of their silver slippers—brocaded or plain—strap style or opera, or sleek satin shoes, which you can have dyed to match your gown. So before "stepping out," step in to Marvin's.



A Grand Slam!

I've a surprise for our next Bridge Party, Anne. It is something absolutely new, and, for the first time in Boston at C. F. Hovey Co. It is called the "Whose Deal Playing Cards"—a gayly attractive telescope case containing two packs of cards — one marked "East-West," to be used when sitting in East-West position, and one marked "North-South," to be used when sitting in that position. These cards save, oh, so much fussing as to "who deals next" and "whose or plain—strap style or opera, turn to move." I'm sure our Bridge Club will adore them, Anne, so let's be the first to introduce this new style. They are priced at only $1.50.



Beauty Bargains!

Do you need a new compact, Anne? Well, why not get one of those darling Coty Compacts which Jordan Marsh Company have reduced from their regular price of $1.50 to 75 cents—including an extra refill. They are having quite an unusual sale of toilet accessories, Anne, and an excellent cold cream that can be used for regular massaging, cleansing, tissue-toning, and a powder base is reduced from 52 to 85 cents. That delightful Donge cold cream soap is specially offered at 60 cents a box —2 for $1. These are only a trio of the good values you will find in the toiletries' section on the street floor annex.

"If Wishes

could come true," sighed a lovely lady acquaintance of mine, "I'd bring back the natural color and beauty of my own graying hair." Dear Lady, this wish can come true—if—you will have one single treatment of Inecto Notox at Gilchrist's Beauty Salon, the most scientific hair dye that I know of. Not a trace of the artificial, and it does not interfere with permanent waving. That wonder-working Komplex Facial which cleanses the skin, tightens enlarged pores and restores sagging muscles is priced $2. Finger, water waves, and manicures give the utmost satisfaction at Gilchrist's Beauty Salon.

The Shop of Surprises,

Anne, is Evelyn's, 8 Winter St. What do you suppose I found there today at 2 for $25, $13.95 and up? The smartest silk crepe ensembles with gay, printed blouses; hand-blocked prints in swanky sport styles; charming georgettes and satin crepes. It isn't often you can buy such garments at these prices. But you can at Evelyn's—and stunning ones, too. If your budget is a bit squirmish—even at these rare values—just turn to the $8.95 rack where you'll find the freshest of early Spring prints and combinations in the most fetching styles. The $5 rack is a revelation! It contains printed silks, and even some bouffant taffeta evening gowns!

The Key to the Secret of lovely hair—lustrous, live hair that gleams with myriad dancing lights, Anne, is Flonzo! This honey-colored liquid made from the harmless camomile blossom is not a dye, nor a bleach, but a wonderful brightener that brings out the glory of burnished copper to the brown head, and sunny-gold to the blonde. Flonzo, prepared by J. Lesquerdieu, is imported from France, and is sold exclusively by Meyer Jonasson Co. (Toilet Goods Dept.) priced $2.50 (large size); $1.50 (small size). So, my Anne, if you would banish the drabness in your hair, and restore the bright sheen that Nature intended it should have, use Flonzo after your shampoo.

Devotedly yours,

Priscilla

NOT A COUGH IN A CARLOAD

5 Concerts in Hub Eve of Opera

By MOSES SMITH

With the Chicago Opera Company opening its stay tonight, the first half of the musical season may be said to have had its dying gasp over the weekend. But what a gasp! No fewer than five concerts offered musical fare for those who had something to spare after heavy operatic investments.

The bulk of this fare was vocal, and principal interest was centered in Lawrence Tibbett, who made his first appearance in Boston before a large audience at Symphony Hall. This young American artist had made a sensation at the Metropolitan Opera.

After the disappointment attendant on the appearance here of previous "sensations," it was an unexpected pleasure to find that Tibbett had not been overpraised.

Although I remember his voice going down only once so low as G—and this with some effort—and on the other hand frequently climbing up to higher tenor tones, the quality always remained essentially baritone. Moreover it is of beautiful quality, as a rule, almost never lost in forcing, and only occasionally becoming thinned when Tibbett sang in half-voice.

Singers in a different medium, but equally fine artists, are J. Rosamond Johnson and Taylor Gordon, who gave a program of negro spirituals at the Hotel Statler. With Johnson at the piano, adding his deep voice to the tenor of Gordon, these two delighted a good-sized audience with their fine performance, in which they very definitely kept to the "spirit" of the negro spiritual.

At the Copley-Plaza, Clara Shear, local soprano, gave a joint concert with Jose Echaniz, Cuban pianist. Miss Shear, whose previous intelligent singing is familiar to Boston operagoers, made the mistake of singing too many pieces, requiring a large volume of tone. Although her voice has apparently expanded since her appearance here two years ago, she subjected it last night to a needlessly cruel strain. The pianist had a brilliant and dazzling clear technique, but his tones were almost entirely of the percussive character, which is euphemism for what the unmitigated call "thumping."

SKATERS CROWD "ICE," SAYS BETTY ALDEN

Young and Old, Novice and Experienced Practice on Gleaming, Hill Surrounded Rink at Clyde Park, Brookline, for Coming Contests

DOWN THROUGH THE WINDING PATH TO THE COUNTRY CLUB'S OUTDOOR rink went a steady procession yesterday, of those for whom so excellent a combination as clear sparkling ice, air like champagne and January's finest brand of sunshine exerts a strong call. Skaters were out in force, the practiced ones who nonchalantly swing through complicated double spirals, the grandpaces dignified even in winter tweeds; and the tiny ones mastering the difficult art with intensity if without the grace that comes with practice.

MISS AGNES BOARDMAN COUNTS FIGURE SKATING AMONG HER ACCOMPLISHMENTS—she is one of the Younger Set thoroughly trained in all the arts and graces considered so necessary if one is feminine and born to the social purple. Her mastery of the shining blades is on a par with her aesthetic dancing and "they say" she fences with skill and adroitness. Yesterday for a rally on the ice she was becomingly frocked in red, the red that is new and smart and frames good looks of the brunette variety so excellently.

EVEN THOUGH SCARCE SEVERAL MILES STRETCH BETWEEN TREMONT ST.'S swirl and the Country Club's rink, the latter, lying so secluded in its rim of encircling hills, might well be in New England's hinterland. It affords the best of outdoor practice fields for Mrs. Theresa Weld Blanchard and Nathaniel Niles, to whom that hour of daylight not devoted to skating practice is considered an hour lost. Every moment they can snatch finds them either at the Arena or at the Club rink, practicing their art with all the intensity of a prima donna or a violin virtuoso.

AS STARS OF THE ICE CARNIVAL FOR ELIZABETH PEABODY HOUSE WEDNESDAY they will show a perfection of pair skating and a handsomeness of costumes unexcelled. Their velvets and satins and ermine, are symbols of the now-no-more Imperial Russia when a Czar ruled that enormous land of many millions. Mrs. Blanchard and Mr. Niles are the "Court Pair," and their gleaming velvets and satins and their complicated figures, on the Arena's crystal field of ice, will hold an entire audience entranced. They are the very starriest stars of the entire Skating Club roster, and they shine with brilliance in Boston, in London, in Berlin and in St. Moritz.

THEIR HOURS OF PRACTICE COME NOT AT ALL AMISS, WHEN IT IS TO BE considered that they will carry the burden for the Boston Skating Club when talented Canadians come over the border and some very special competitions take place in the Arena. Some time in February, after the Ice Carnival is well over and many dollars safely banked in Elizabeth Peabody House's strong box, the championships of North America will be fought for, and even the veriest zero at the skating game will thrill at the excellence of Boston's competitors against the invaders.

DUTIFUL DEBUTANTES HAVE CERTAIN THINGS TO BE THANKFUL FOR. Their faithful services as probationary Junior Leaguers at charity fetes and benefits insure them front row places from which to view the spectacles they aid. Wednesday at the Arena in the choice selection of this season's buds, who will officiate, as ushers. There will be the Misses Betty Emery, Ruth Lyman, Anna Walcott, Rosamond Gardiner, Allson Towle, Anne Robbins, Eloise Weld, Rosamond Musgrave, Gertrude Marean, Dorothea Ware, Carolyn Read and Penelope Perry, girls who have done yeoman service many a time and oft during this, their "first winter."

BOSTON'S FEAST OF FINE MUSIC GOES ALONG NOT ENTIRELY UNINTERRUPTEDLY, so far as other functions of social importance during the two weeks are concerned. Miss Hannah Hallowell and Nelson Bigelow, exchanging their marriage vows in Milton's fine old First Parish Meeting House at noon of the first Wednesday of opera set up what cannot help but be a rival occasion. Boston's entire world of social consequence, to put the number conservatively, will be interested in the nuptials, and even in these times of marvellous happenings, there is no magic whereby a fashionable personage can attend a wedding and a reception in Milton, and listen to La Boheme at the Opera House, at one and the same time.

WEDNESDAY WILL BRING TO THE N. PENROSE HALLOWELLS A SECOND occasion when they have sat in high estate in the ancient Milton Meetinghouse during the wedding ceremonial of a cherished daughter. The former Miss Mary Hallowell wed with John Crocker, several years ago, in the austere last century edifice that lacks everything of ecclesiastical elaborateness but is impressive in the simplicity of its day. Mrs. Crocker will be in the bridal train preceding Miss Hallowell to the altar. The others are Miss Ellen Hallowell, Miss Edith Parker and Miss Margery Richardson, eminent in the local younger set, and Miss Margaret Hallowell.

FOR THE BRIDE'S COTERIE MANHATTAN SUPPLIES A sprightly member, Miss Ruth Trafford, daughter of the Perry Traffords. Manhattan also supplies importing men for the boutonnieres brigade that always makes so impressively pictorial a part of the processional. Henry P. Upham Harris, R. Colgate, Vernon Mann, Lloyd O. Vernon Mann, Caspar C. De Gersdorf and Douglas Rusk supply the New York atmosphere. Alfred Coldwell, also of the staff, belongs more intimately to Boston than to New York, the place of his adoption. George T. Rice, Edward L. Bigelow and Chandler Bigelow, the latter best man, are well within Boston's most exclusive circles. So altogether the usher squad is high representative.

DINING OUT, OR THEMSELVES GIVING DINNERS, IS BRILLIANTLY a part of the Grand Opera regime for prominent Boston matrons. Mrs. B. H. Bristow Draper is giving a series of dinners and luncheons during the opera season with elect as becomes the handsome spouse of one of the opera's most influential guarantors. The Draper dinner party for the premiere this evening includes the Thomas B. Gannets, Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Howe and Mr. Terry, the same group that will sit in state in Box 36, when Mr. Weber lifts his baton in the crowded temple of music and Lohengrin's first sonorous strains resound over a hushed audience.

EX-KAISER BACK IN EXILE AFTER DAY OF GLORY

Doorn, Holland, Jan. 28 (AP)—After a day of memories of imperial glory, Wilhelm Hohenzollern today reassumed the role of a royal exile.

On his 70th birthday, yesterday, the former Kaiser stood resplendent in the uniform of a field marshal of the First Royal Guards, and on his breast were the highest decorations within the gift of imperial Germany and many other nations.

Male participants in the celebration, garbed in the gala uniform of their military ranks and wearing spiked helmets, saluted Wilhelm as "his majesty, the kaiser and king."

Princess Hermine, who the kaiser married in exile, was not present to share her husband's triumph or to be addressed as "empress." The official explanation was she was ill.

BEWARE THE COUGHS THAT FOLLOW FLU!

They May Weaken Your System and Lead to Serious Trouble

You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known druga creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion may help you avoid flu, but is not sold as a flu remedy. If you have fever, or think you may have the flu, see your doctor immediately. (adv.)

J. Walker and awarded gold medals of valor.

The heroes of the hour, hardy, weather-beaten men of the liner America, who brought safely to port the 32 exhausted, half-frozen men they had saved from the foundering Italian freighter Florida, accepted the acclaim of the populace modestly—almost bashfully.

"NOT USED TO IT."

"We're not used to this hero stuff," remarked Chief Officer Harry Manning, who commanded the men who swung the oars in the lifeboat that set forth from the America on the storm-lashed waters.

But it was no new experience for Capt. Fried—the business of being acclaimed. Just three years ago he won similar recognition after his rescue of 25 seamen from the British steamship Antinoe.

Shortly before 9 o'clock, the municipal welcome boat, Macom, gaily bedecked with flags, left pier A, the Battery, for Hoboken, where the America was docked and where Capt. Fried and his men were waiting. On board the Macom were Police Commissioner Grover Whalen, the city's "official greeter," and other officials.

HEROES SALUTE THRONG

The police band struck up stirring airs as the Macom nosed alongside the America. Several thousand persons, assembled on and near the docks at Hoboken, cheered as Fried, Manning and the others stepped from the ship to the Macom. Fried and Manning repeatedly saluted the crowd in response to the ovation.

Thousands of persons were massed in Battery Park and along contiguous thoroughfares. When the Macom returned at 12:40 p. m. to the Battery, a roar of applause burst forth a Capt. Fried and his men disembarked.

FLU WARNING

U.S. warns against Flu

Colds lead to Flu. Flu is dangerous and often deadly. The bacteria are always present in nose and throat—and a sudden increase taxes lungs and heart. Breathe in OZO Mist to keep the bacteria down. A few drops on handkerchief, or pillow, dry and then pleasant germicidal, healing OZO Mist vapor clears head, dries out excess mucus, relieves irritations and coughs. You feel quick relief way down to bronchial passages. Get OZO Mist (50 applications 75c) at all druggists.

GOOD SAMARITANS

These shoes hide their virtues

To bring blessed relief to an irritated, swollen large-toe joint . . . . to lift arches out of their torturing misery—that has been the Good Samaritan purpose of Coward Shoes for more than sixty years.

And yet to look at this Bunion Shoe (left) . . . or this Arch-Help Shoe (right) . . . is to discover an additional virtue: Their appearance conceals the good they do. They have the comfort . . . . but not the look . . . . of remedial footwear.

by a moderating northwest gale.

The Silver Maple gave her position as approximately 420 miles northeast of Bermuda, more than 780 miles east fo Boston.

An encouraging feature of the Silver Maple's message was her announcement that the barometer was rising, giving indication of better weather.

The Mohave, when she last reported, was still approximately 200 miles from the distressed ship. She hoped to be at the Silver Maple's side by 1 a. m. tomorrow morning.

The Mohave relayed to Boston Coast Guard headquarters the Silver Maple's latest radiogram. It read:

"6 a. m. 33.23 North, 56.48 West. Set 393. Seven miles per hour. Northwest gale moderating. Glass rising. Master, Silver Maple."

The Coast Guard cutter Tampa, trailing her sister ship, Mojave, is also speeding to the aid of the distressed vessel.

The Tampa, which was dispatched from Boston, is 60 miles—four hours in point of time—behind the Mojave.

Another vessel still causing anxiety is the steam trawler Seiner, a week overdue at Groton, Ct., and last reported in the region of Georges Banks on January 15. She is believed lost.

A third vessel whose fate is veiled in mystery is the Italian freighter Capo Vado, believed in distress about midway between the Azores and Bermuda. According to advices from London, the tug Humber has gone to her assistance.

Two Steamship Crashes Off Coast of England

London, Jan. 28 (AP)—Two steamship collisions were reported from coastal points of England today, both of them taking place in thick weather.

The British freighter Ravenstone collided with the Greek steamer Neion south of Dungeness. Both were reported badly damaged and assistance was sent.

The British motor vessel Pelacio collided with the British tanker Inverurie at anchor off the Mersey at Liverpool. The Pelacio's stern was badly damaged and her forepeak was full of water. She reported she had taken aboard the crew of the tanker which had a hole torn in her No. 3 tank.

The Greek steamer Neion, which was bound from Buenos Aires for London, later put in at Dover. The freighter Ravelston, wireless that she was returning to Dover. She reported that she required no assistance.

Sydney, N. S., Jan. 28 (AP)—The Canadian Government steamer Stanley has been ordered from North Sydney to attempt to release the Norwegian freighter Prime, ice-blocked between Margaree and Cheticamp.

FIGHT IN HOUSE ON 'DRY' FUND

Washington, Jan. 28 (INS)—Administration leaders of the House have decided upon the extraordinary procedure of proposing a temporary change in the rules to defeat the Senate's $24,000,000 dry fund appropriation and the curb put upon the tax refund powers of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

The plan was outlined at conferences of Speaker Longworth, Rep. Tilson (R) of Connecticut, majority floor leader, and Representative Snell (R) of New York, chairman of the rules committee.

The unusual action, it appeared, will be forced by a combination of Southern drys and a small group of wets who are determined to force an unwanted $21,000,000 on the dry regime, and the fight made by Representative Garner (D) of Texas against the tax refund policies of the treasury.

Although the Senate returned the first deficiency bill to the House last week, containing the "two riders," the measure has remained awaited upon pending support out of a course of action by leaders.

While appropriation bills on which the two houses disagree are usually sent to conference committees for ironing out of differences, the backers of the Harris dry amendment served notice that they would refuse the necessary unanimous consent to give the bill to conferees.

Demand for Vicks Supplies Good Index to Spread of Flu

An interesting sidelight on the present influenza epidemic has been furnished by the demand for Vicks VapoRub, which has increased in various parts of the country, due to the external treatment which proved so helpful in 1918.

Last November, such orders from the Pacific Coast for more and more Vicks told of the beginning of a new epidemic. As the flu moved east, similar increases in the demand for Vicks marked its spread from state to state.

Now that influenza has become fairly general, it is once more necessary, in spite of vastly increased capacity, to run the Vicks laboratories all night long, as the public now demands over 216,000 jars every 24 hours.

Camel Fight Promotes Aviation in Turkey

Stamboul, Turkey, Jan. 28 (AP)—Eight camels, lords of a race that is fast dying out in Turkey, are to meet in the stadium of Stamboul, there to lay down their lives, or at best smash their humps, so that more airplanes may sweep through Turkish skies.

The Turkish National Aviation League is to stage the camel combat, to swell the millions of liras already raised for the purchase of the republic's planes. Camel fighting is a sport as dear to the Anatolians as bull fighting to the Spaniard.

Two gentlemen camels are led into the ring from which there is one narrow alley of exit. One is tied and the other left free. Then a female camel is led in and the untied male flirts with her while the tied male looks on with growing jealousy. When he has reached a fighting pitch of anger, the lady is led off, the jealous male is untied and he straightaway makes for his rival.

Firebrands Hope Stewart Will Best Rockefeller; Why

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, Jan. 28—Don't imagine for a moment that the great majority of workers and other ordinary folks throughout the country regard Big Business as opprobrious epithet. It regards itself. Millions of people still have the idea that Big Business and Big Finance are selfish, selfish, selfish, not solely for their own pockets and utterly callous to the well-being of workers and the public.

B. C. Forbes

Socialists, Communists and other enemies of the "capitalistic system" have drawn abundant ammunition from the long-drawn-out Sinclair-Stewart-Blackmer squabble regarding the millions of dollars they said a handful of men had wrung from their hands through the mysterious Continental Trading Company, organized to put through a deal which brought wholesale condemnation when dragged into the light.

The subsequent action of those involved in that now notorious transaction served only to confirm suspicion that its perpetrators were ashamed of what they had done. There was sufficient scurrying to foreign soils when an investigation approached. Blackmer, rather than return and face the music, has preferred to leave the Government pursuing his property here.

Even within the ranks of Big Business and High Finance there have been few, if any, defenders of the Sinclair-Stewart-Blackmer-Continental Company jugglery. But published criticism and condemnation have come chiefly from editorial writers, politicians and working-class agitators, particularly the last.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., whose family founded the Standard Oil Company, has, however, boldly come forward with a demand that Stewart withdraw from the chairmanship of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana. Mr. Rockefeller claims that, when the scandal first came to the front, Stewart received a definite promise from Col. Robert W. Stewart that he would resign whenever Mr. Rockefeller should request him to do so. Stewart is now said to have consented to fight Rockefeller for control of votes at the coming series of stockholders' meetings. The battle for proxies is now being waged.

The outcome will be watched with intense interest by all classes. Every malcontent, every Socialist, every Communist, is eager to see Stewart win. His victory would be acclaimed by them as "proof positive" that Big Business and High Finance are as rotten, as crooked, as selfish as their worst enemies picture them.

Anyone who knows young Rockefeller realizes how distasteful so unpleasant an episode is to him. He is essentially a man of peace and does not court publicity. He has been moved to take the mercenary or spiteful motive, but wholly because of his conception of how business should be conducted and how it should not be conducted. The whole Continental Trading deal disgusted him as it disgusted many others.

Should Colonel Stewart's conduct be upheld and Rockefeller's protest be defeated, Big Business and High Finance will receive a blow whose final consequences cannot be gauged.

Incidentally, it is unthinkable that Colonel Stewart or anyone else in families with the Daniel-and-Solomon relations between the elder and younger Rockefellers can imagine for a moment that the father would dream of doing other than supporting the son. I know no family where filial ties are closer.

A billion-dollar banking institution has arisen in a third American city—San Francisco. It is not so huge that the fact that the First National City Bank of New York, was developed in this country. But although New York has the Chase, the Chase and the Guaranty Trust Co., while Chicago also now has the Continental, San Francisco's A. P. Giannini of San Francisco and Los Angeles is the creator of the first billion-dollar Pacific Coast enterprise, the Transamerica Corporation. This structure was organized to acquire stock ownership in the Bankitaly Corporation, the Bank of Italy and their affiliated and subsidiary companies.

According to an unofficial analysis, the total resources of the Transamerica Corporation and its affiliations have reached $1,3000,000,000. Other Giannini institutions, including the Bank of America (New York), the Bank of America (California) and the Banca d'Italia (a bank which has 29 branches in Italy), swell the total resources of interests under his ownership to over $2,200,000,000, enough to take away one's breath.

The leading bulls express confidence in their ability to keep things going. They argue that as the right direction—meaning upward—until Hoover is inaugurated. About what may happen after that, they do not care to commit themselves.

U. S. TRADE HAS EARNINGS FOR STEADY GAINS COMPANIES UP

Washington, Jan. 28 (AP)—Steady progress by the United States toward a dominant position in world trade in manufactured goods was indicated today by Commerce Department figures analyzing exports and imports for 1928.

Out of the total American exports of $5,029,642,000 which came here to settling a new high level in that category, nearly 45 per cent of the gross was made up of finished manufactured articles, the American shipments abroad of manufactured products amounted to $2,250,386,000, while for 1927 exports of manufactures were $1,981,-35,000.

Sharp increases in world takings of American automotive products and miscellaneous articles in general types were responsible for the growth.

Exports and imports for 1928 by categories compared with 1927 follow:

Exports—Manufactured goods, $2,250,386,000 against $1,981,955,000; partly manufactured goods, $1,-12,000 against $609,727,000; foods ready for consumption, $467,035,-000 against $462,220,000; crude foods, $93,487,000 against $121,167,000; raw materials for use in manufacturing, $1,293,264,000 against $1,197,-376,000.

Imports—Manufactured goods, $908,918,000 against $878,278,000; partly manufactured goods, $1,-12,000 against $749,651,000; foods ready for consumption, $497,246,000 against $450,796,000; crude foods, $69,542,000 against $104,373,000; raw materials for use in manufacturing, $1,466,544,000 against $1,091,-42,000.

Utilities Join in $42,000,000 Move

A $42,000,000 project, uniting utility and banking interests with railway operations on national scale, announced by Lehman Brothers, bankers, company, to be known as General Realty & Utilities Corp., incorporated in Delaware, will have real estate and security investments. Companies interested, besides Lehman, include Thompson-Starrett Co., Inc., builders; Tishman Realty & Construction Co., Inc.; Atlas Power & Light Corp.; Central States Electric Corp.; National Electric Power Co.; Hayden, Stone & Co., and Stone & Webster, Inc. Louis W. Abrams, New York realtor, will be president.

State Street Notes

ON all recent recessions Street has reported seale buying of New Haven by houses with New England connections.

EASTERN Massachusetts Street Railway Co. reports December, 1928, net income after all charges, including depreciation, $128,158, compared with $131,361 in December, 1927.

FOR 12 months to December 31, 1928, net income of Eastern Massachusetts was $982,783, against $772,080 in same 12 months a year ago.

IN quarters usually well-informed on company's affairs it is maintained that there are prospects for a two-for-one split-up in National Dairy Products in March

Money Should Stay Firm, Harvard View

Harvard Economic Society says: "Throughout the week, the asked rate on 90-day acceptance has been at the level of the New York rediscount rate, a condition such as has usually foreshadowed an advance in rediscount rates. The failure of the reserve authorities to make an advance this week may be due to a belief that a recession in buying acceptances is all that is needed in order to keep money firm. At the level of the present demand, in our opinion, the existing pressure methods are proved ineffective in controlling speculative expansion in 1928.

"In the near future, easy rates in general should remain firm, despite the seasonal tendency toward ease in January and early February."

Cotton Is Steady

New York, Jan. 28 (AP)—Cotton futures were steady: March, 19.81; May, 19.34; July, 19.56; October, 19.22; December, 19.13.

DISCUSSIONS of a spring split-up in General Electric are still pounding around the Street.

CALIFORNIA crude oil output averaged 771,900 barrels daily for week, increase of 15,000 barrels over the preceding week.

N. Y. CENTRAL JUMPS OVER $5 PER SHARE

By W. S. COUSINS.

New York, Jan. 28—Rails in the stock market marked up the prices of their favorites in a lively scramble for both the industrial and the railroad stocks in trading today.

New York Central made an enthusiastic response to the Interstate Commerce Commission's decision permitting the leasing of Big Four and other subsidiary lines by jumping over 5 points to 196¼.

Tobacco stocks and Newcomber specialties moved up brilliantly, and the old Radio-Victor combination moved into higher ground.

TURNOVER IS HEAVY.

The turnover in 10:00 to 20,000-share blocks was unusually heavy in the first half-hour, making total sales in this period 545,800 shares.

Aggressive buying of the motor stocks which started near the week-end was again in evidence, demand being in evidence for General Motors, Chrysler and Studebaker.

All of the electrical manufacturing stocks were also strong, General Electric and Westinghouse improving on last week's closing prices.

Radio's new 8-point jump was in response to the annual report for 1928, showing net income of $15.26 a share.

So has the Commerce Commission's decision, the New York Central is permitted to acquire by lease the control of the Big Four, Michigan Central & Chicago, Kalamazoo & Saginaw lines, already controlled.

The consolidation is the largest yet authorized by the commission and will link up 26,000 miles of track in an 11,500-mile system under control of New York Central.

It also paves the way for similar consolidations for which application has already been made.

New York Air was sold at the highest price since the distribution of rights last year.

Chicago Great Western preferred reached a new high at 58½, up 2½ points, in the lead of the speculative issues.

TAPE IS FAR BEHIND.

Accumulation of week-end orders clogged up the mechanism of the market and the tape was often 10 minutes at the end of the first hour. The oil stocks were upset by a flood of conflicting rumors, based on the reports of wasteful over-production of crude oil and the new cuts in prices of Mid-Continent crude.

Sinclair was heavily sold around 37½, down 2 points from Saturday's close, and losses of a point or so were scored in Texas Gulf, Atlantic Refining and other well known oils.

Announcements for the money market were seen in the bank reports of new shipments of gold from London to New York, and the money was unchanged at 5 per cent since the turn of the year, the "outsiders" Industrial companies, outside banks, etc., have poured $500,000,000 into the call loan market, and the banks are not financing the stock market off the shoulders of the over-worked banks.

Liggett and Myers raced up to 100¾ at the head of the tobacco stocks, Cory led the specialties.

International Nickel slipped down on profit-taking.

Speculative selling later blocked the progress of the tidal wave of rising prices.

Electric Bond Again Big Feature on Curb

Electric Bond & Share, which tacked on $46 a share last week, was up $47.50 in the first hour on the New York Curb trading. The new high was 274¼, the stock selling under its day's top in the later dealings. The rise in the stock last week was accompanied by rumors that the company would merge with the Electric Bond & Share Securities Corp., thereby involving a complete recapitalization and stock split-up. The new stock would pay the $6 annual dividend rate, according to the reports, along with an extra 4 per cent in stock.

Wall Street Gossip

CASH and stock amounting to $13,-986,800 will be distributed this week by General Motors Corp. to 12,035 employes through savings and investment plan, it is said of 1923.

MANUFACTURED products formed 70 per cent of exports trade of United States for 1928, according to James A. Farrell, president of United States Steel Corp.

BROOKLYN Union Gas reports for 1928 net equivalent to $5.03 a share against $7.65 a share in 1927.

LAST week for first time this year bond offerings topped the $100,000,000 mark, with a total of $118,000,000. This compared with $57,000,000 the previous week and $41,000,000 a year ago.

ATCHISON handled 37,836 cars of freight cars in week ended January 25, against 37,365 in same week last year.

NUMEROUS stock splittups and new listings presage, many brokers believe, six or seven and eight million-share days in next few months.

ILLINOIS Central Railroad has or-dered 17 locomotive and the Missouri Pacific from the Lima Locomotive Works, Inc., Lima, O.

COAL ore shipments from Lake Erie docks to interior furnaces in first three weeks of January totaled 280,000 tons, against 420 tons in like 1925 period.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC Company has ordered 7325 tons of rails from the Colorado Fuel & Iron Company.

FOLLOWING mid-continent reduction in crude oil prices, Gulf Coast Grade B and light coastal crude oil have been reduced 10 cents a barrel and Arkansas and Louisiana grades 3 to 32 cents.

Rush Survey Plans on Nicaragua Canal

By WILLIAM P. FLYTHE
Universal Service

Washington, Jan. 28—The American Government today was making plans for a survey of a proposed interoceanic canal across Nicaragua, with a view of undertaking the mightiest engineering project of all times.

Supported by an overwhelming majority of the House and Senate, it appeared certain that the Edge resolution, providing for the survey, would be adopted at an early date and army engineers sent to the scene immediately thereafter.

With the approval of President Coolidge, two Presidents before him and President-Elect Hoover, the plan to link the Atlantic and the Pacific with a second and larger waterway is nearer realization than at any time since 1899, when the Nicaraguan route was recommended by the Isthmian Canal Commission in preference to Panama.

URGENTLY NEEDED

As the Panama Canal nears capacity, a limit which the government says will be reached within ten years, immediate action is urgent in the opinion of engineers.

It will require ten years to build a secondary set of locks for Panama. It will require ten years to build the Nicaragua Canal.

And while the chief of engineers of the army says that a secondary set of locks and other highly expensive improvements to the Panama Canal would take care of traffic for a long period, the army and navy consider a second canal vitally necessary for the national defense.

With the problematical destruction of the Panama Canal by airplane attack already definitely proved in military maneuvers, the American high sea forces would be locked in the Atlantic or the Pacific, with the deserted coast defenseless.

A second canal, particularly the Nicaraguan route, would increase the difficulties of the enemy as well as the mobility of the American fleet.

WOULD SAVE TIME

In addition to this the Nicaraguan route would shorten the distance from the Pacific to the Atlantic coast of the United States by from one to two days, a tremendous saving to commerce since 9 per cent of the present Panama traffic is from coast to coast of this country.

In a comprehensive report prepared under the supervision of Maj.-Gen. Edgar Jadwin, chief of army engineers, for submission to the President and his cabinet, he says:

"One of the reasons for the Panama Canal was national defense. Now a part of the cost of the canal is carried on the books, as in arbitrary proportion of the cost representing its value from a national defense standpoint. A second canal would, of course, give a national defense value that there would be none from Pacific to Atlantic and two from Pacific to Atlantic and two sites would have to be destroyed to cut intercoeanic communication.

"It is believed that the advantage of having two routes available so that all your eggs are not in one basket, outweighs the disadvantages.

TO BRING BUSINESS

"Of course, there is more to be considered concerning a Nicaraguan canal than the mere question of interoceanic communication, however important this may be. Such a canal will undoubtedly develop commerce and trade in Latin-America that will never be developed with the Panama Canal alone.

"The history of the United States shows pretty conclusively that there is hardly any limit to the number of transportation facilities that are desirable, and that each new one generally develops commerce and trade far beyond estimates made for it.

"From this standpoint it appears to be only a question of when will the Nacaragnan project warrant the expense involved."

In 1826 the President of the United States was interested in the Nicaraguan canal and sent one John Bailey there to make a survey. He cruised about and laid out pretty much the same route that still is favored.

In 1850-52, a careful survey of the Nicaraguan route was made by Col. Childs and this route was practically the same as the one later determined upon and now under consideration. Discussions and investigations continued.

There was a survey in 1872-73 by Lull, and one in 1885 by Menocal, followed by a concession and actual work on a canal by the Maritime Canal Co., of Nicaragua, which failed.

PLAN PREPARED

The Nicaraguan canal board, in 1895, found it impracticable within the time fixed by law and the limited means appropriated, to accomplish its mission, and it was followed by the Nicaraguan canal commission of 1897, which reported in 1899.

Then the Isthmian canal commission of 1899-1901 made surveys, prepared a project and reported to the 57th Congress. This commission recommended the following route.

The Atlantic end of the canal to be at Greytown, where two jetties and a harbor, two miles long, were to be constructed. From there the canal was to run along the north side of the San Juan River, 44 miles, separated from it in places by dykes. Four locks were to be located in this stretch.

Then the canal was to enter the San Juan river, which was to be changed into an arm of Lake Nicaragua, 50 miles long, by a dam at Conchuda.

PRICE REDUCED

The channel across Lake Nicaragua, 70 miles, was to be dredged. Then the canal was to pass through the continental divide west of Lake Nicaragua, and drop to the level of the Pacific by four locks. There was to be a dredged harbor and a jetty at Pirto on the Pacific side.

The majority of the many investigators of an interoceanic canal, including the commission of 1899-1901, recommended the Nicaraguan route as against the Panama route.

However, the commission of 1899-01 considered the Panama route more expensive, because of the price asked by the French company for its work and rights, and in addition there were treaty difficulties with Colombia. The French had first begun digging the Panama canal, but failed.

The price for the Panama route was reduced, treaty difficulties were overcome, and the reasons favoring the Nicaraguan route were largely eliminated.

COMPARISON GIVEN

Comparisons between the Panama canal and the proposed canal are:

Length of Nicaragua canal, 113 miles on land, 70 miles in lake.

Length of Panama canal, 50 miles.

Width of Nicaragua canal, 500 feet.

Width of Panama, 500 feet.

Depth of Nicaragua, 85 feet.

Depth of Panama, 40 feet.

Locks of Nicaragua, 84 by 740 feet.

Locks of Panama, 110 by 1000 feet.

Summit level of Nicaragua, 110 feet (eight locks).

Summit level of Panama, 87 feet (six locks).

The figures for the Nicaraguan canal were made long before the modern development of shipping and the new survey will take into consideration locks much larger than those of Panama and a much greater depth.

CHANGES TO BE MADE

In addition experience gained in Panama as to earth dams, locks, etc., will lead to change in location and design. Curvature of the proposed canal also will be changed from the original survey. All this will lead to new locations not covered by old maps, profiles and borings. Thus a great deal of additional surveying and planning are necessary to produce an up-to-date plan.

The water supply of the Nicaraguan route is vastly greater than that of Panama. Lake Nicaragua is 8234 square miles in area, while Gatun Lake in Panama is only 150 square miles.

The water shed of Lake Nicaragua is about 11,450 square miles, while that of Gatun is 1320 square miles.

BILL designed to reduce appreciably amount of bank loans for stock speculation has been introduced by Senator Glass of Virginia.

COOLIDGE OR HOOVER BULL MARKET?

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor

Just whose bull market is this Wall St affair? They used to call it the Coolidge bull market. When Hoover won the election, writers in the "big canyon" started calling it the Hoover bull market. Lately they haven't been calling it by any name at all. Financial writers are apt to give up in despair when they try to separate the Coolidge from the Hoover bull market. The next few weeks will be apt to tell us whether or not it's worth one's while to try.

Weston W. Adams, who was recently admitted as a member of the Boston Stock Exchange, is the youngest broker on the floor of the exchange. Mr Adams is a graduate of Harvard University of the class of 1928 and while a student at this institution was very much interested in athletics, especially hockey. He is the son of Charles F. Adams vice-president of the Boston National Bank. Mr Adams is associated with E. M. Hamlin & Co., and will act as floor broker for that firm.

It is a time for some courage. Vice-President Frank J. Fahey of the Gillette Safety Razor Co. is today on his way to Europe aboard the Homeric.

Vice President Fahey has made numerous trips overseas, and this, in part at least, accounts for the increase in Gillette's foreign business. One of the outstanding feature of its 1928 report. Mr Fahey in the next three months will visit the company's branch offices and agencies in Italy, Spain, Turkey, Africa, Near East, France and England.

Writer of "Wall St. Gossip" says "We note that the report of the Harvard College treasurer gives a value of $1 for the "entire list" of 12,500 shares of General Electric. This is doing a gross injustice to General Electric as that list of stock, if we figure correctly, is worth $3,100,000. This is published in fear that some one might offer $2 for the lot and get it. We would like to see Harvard grow and prosper."

Only a few weeks from now and we will see the beginning of boom days for one of New England's greatest industries, the entertainment of summer visitors. Many thousands will come in automobiles. It would be a great thing if we could make a good impression on these visitors, who bring much money and good-will to this section, by having more nearly uniform traffic regulations.

Less than a dozen miles from Boston, on a broad treed boulevard, automobilists are summonsed into court for exceeding 15 miles an hour. On a four-car road, also bordered chiefly by trees, in a town just outside Boston, anything over 30 miles calls for a court appearance. In neither place is there a speed limit of 35 miles. In Connecticut, which has comparatively few accidents, the speed limit has been abolished, and a rule of "slow traffic keep to the right" is enforced.

The Bay State holds costly automobile highways to South Shore for example, and slow traffic is allowed at will to block the middle lanes. There is a difference between reasonable and unreasonable speed, of course. "Fines for reverse only" is a poor plan with which to greet the throngs of summer guests, to say nothing of our own citizen drivers, at least 90 per cent of whom are careful at all times.

Charles W. Kellogg, president of Engineers Public Service Company, announces today that the Virginia Electric and Power Company, an Engineers' subsidiary, has just completed a transmission line connection between its system and that of the Virginia Public Service Company at Occoquan, Virginia, 20 miles south of Washington. This bridges the last gap in electric power interconnection along the Eastern Seaboard from Bangor, Maine, to Miami, Florida.

Lynn, Worcester in New Financing

Lynn will receive bids until January 30 for $400,000 4 per cent school and harbor bonds, payable 1930 to 1944.

Worcester will receive bids until January 28 for $600,000 notes dated January 29 and payable December 1. Keene, N. H., awarded $100,000 loan due December 5 to Old Colony Corporation at $.18 per cent. Other bidder was Merchants National Bank of Boston, 5.35 per cent.

FACTORIES IN LEAD WITH ACTIVITY

Mid-winter weather conditions continue to favor indoor operations, especially the factory industry, which maintains its lead in activity, as compared with other forms of business activity. Severe cold with, in most areas, very stormy weather, has tended to retard business in salesmen on the road, while retail trade has been helped by the weather, mainly in population centers. In all three lines, however, operations were relatively more active than a year ago, says Bradstreet's.

In the list of favored industries, iron, steel, automobile, implement and machinery manufacturing lines seemed to have an unquenchable lead, but cold weather very generally helped the coal industry; copper mining was active under the stimulus of large foreign and domestic takings, and oil well and gas supplies, electrical goods and radio materials were bought freely.

In other lines, shoe manufacturing, furniture and other activity rather footwear sold freely and rayon and silk manufacturing were at high points. Flour mills and operations in the southwest were buttressed by large sales, this partly due to the growth of harvest, while grain prices generally were close to the high points of the season. Movement of seeds also has been sold of late.

In the list of less fortunately situated trade, dry goods buying outside of large centers was reported rather quiet, building operations were interfered with in many instances by weather conditions and buying of wool, knit goods and jewelry was spotty.

Part of the strength of wheat was due to the uneasiness caused by at one cold in some areas, although in the Southwest crop reports were fairly favorable. The raising of the government estimate of 1928 wheat yield in Canada was a restraining influence upon the rise in this grain. Corn was in good export request.

The output of automobiles for 1928 at 4,257,000 units was 21.1 per cent ahead of 1927 and 1.2 per cent ahead of the hitherto record year, 1926, the production of cotton ginning revealed 13,937,000 bales realized, a gain of 11.4 per cent over 1927, but a decrease of 16.8 per cent from the peak yield of 1926. Steel output was influenced by the latter returns and print cloths were easier.

In the Boston trade the feature was been the holding of "shows" at many cities, with what is said to be satisfactory business resulting. In the steel trade, features are the continued excessive strength of scrap metal, the maintenance of mill output at from 85 to 90 per cent, and the revival of leral tastings of steel by the automobile industry. Western steel prices remain.

Consolidated Film Has Big Contract

Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., world's largest film printing laboratories, now expects to announce shortly consummation of one of the largest contracts for film printing negotiated in the industry for many years. It is reported that one of the leading motion picture producing and distributing companies in the country has agreed to turn over to Consolidated all of the film printing of its Eastern units, which will make this a deal involving millions of feet of film printing.

Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., maintains three plants in the East and two in Hollywood with completely equipped laboratories for printing both silent and sound films. Herbert J. Yates, president, said final announcement of the deal would shortly be made.

Electric Equipment Inquiry Is Active

Inquiry for electrical equipment is holding up well throughout the country, and both producers and users are fairly unanimous in the conviction that this year's requirements will materially exceed those of 1928, Electrical World reports. Electrical equipment and accessories valued at $2,650,000,000 were manufactured in this country last year, a gain of about 24 per cent contrasted with the 1927 total. Business in the Eastern district in the past week has been active, with the trend toward prime movers, substation equipment and affiliated apparatus. Several hydro-electric companies are buying heavily in New England.

State Insurance on Autos Urged

President H. C. Hart of the Nash New England Company agrees with Frank A. Goodwin, former State registrar of motor vehicles, and the Boston Evening American, that the State should supply compulsory automobile insurance at cost.

He disagrees with Former Registrar Goodwin and the Boston American in certain particulars, holding the opinion that "compulsory insurance should be affixed to the driver and issued in conjunction with the operator's license rather than go with the car registration."

STATES HIS CASE

Here is President Hart's statement:

"I hardly feel that I am in position to comment on House Pamphlet No. 225, on the matter of compulsory motor vehicle insurance for the reason that I have never been in sympathy with either the present plan or that one suggested in this bill by Frank A. Goodwin.

"My thought has always been that compulsory insurance should be affixed to the driver and issued in conjunction with the operator's license rather than go with the car registration. All said and done, isn't it the operator of a motor vehicle who takes the risk or hazard on the highway, and shouldn't the operator carry this insurance rather than the automobile?

"I do feel, however, that Frank A. Goodwin's suggestion is quite in order, so far as the State of Massachusetts maintaining a department for the provision of this type of insurance at cost to the insured."

When President Hart's statement was called to former Registrar Goodwin's attention, the latter said:

"Of course, the important thing in President Hart's letter is that he agrees with us, that when the state orders its citizens to insure for personal liability it should provide the service at cost.

"His suggestion, however, that the policy should run to the driver of the car instead of to the owner is open to serious objection. First, there are probably in Massachusetts 100,000 men earning a living driving automobiles, and the salaries they get are not too much to take care of their families.

"I am afraid if they were compelled to pay an insurance premium, or a contribution, to the State Fund, it would be in the nature of a license fee necessary to be paid before they could work at their trade.

"Manifestly, this would be a great hardship, and I am sure the legislature would never pass such a proposition for that reason alone.

"Second, insurance is required in order that persons hurt or killed may receive compensation. Practically every automobile on the road is registered. You never see a car on the streets without plates, which means that when the car is insured, we get almost 100 per cent financial responsibility. But let us say that we shift from that responsibility to one shifted from the car to the driver.

WHO'S PAYS IT

"I think it is safe to say that there are more people in the car than are from 10,000 to 15,000 people driving cars in this State without a license, and that being so, it must be clear to everyone how hard it would be to fix responsibility.

"Students of human nature each year who the minor children of the owner of a car drive their parents cars and get into accidents. The accounts now have to pay because the car is insured, but if the driver were insured, instead of the car, of course, in these cases there would be no financial responsibility.

"Many similar instances could be related.

"Third, and probably most important of all thousands of accidents that happen during the year are the result of defective equipment, and certainly a driver should not be responsible for the failure of the engine to keep his brakes and other equipment in proper condition. However, the very fact that an owner would know he was relieved of responsibility would make him careful to inspect his car in condition, because it is surprising how many car owners hate to part with their money unless compelled to."

Is your auto insurance costing you too much? Ought the law to compel you to furnish profits to private companies? Do the present zone rates seem fair to you?

Would you like the overhead cut from compulsory insurance?

Would you like to get your insurance and registration at one counter, at one time, and for one price? If so, sign the accompanying petition:

BOSTON MOTHER PRAISES HEARST $25,000 TEMPERANCE OFFER

CONTEST IS PRAISED BY MANY

Competitive plans entered in the temperance prize contest announced by the Boston Evening American and other Hearst newspapers, following the offer of William Randolph Hearst of $25,000 for the best practical substitute for prohibition, continue to flow into Boston in an unabated stream.

Those others with desire to enter the contest between now and its close on April 30, may send in their plans to the Temperance Contest Editor of the Boston Evening American, but should first study thoroughly the purposes of the contest and the seven rules governing it. They are published herewith.

For a plan to receive the serious consideration of the temperance contest committee, which is to be composed of representative American citizens, it must take into consideration all of the factors of the problem, and it must submit a definite, workable scheme capable of being translated into action.

Views received by the Boston Evening American of American citizens of note on Hearst's prize offer follow:

A MOTHER'S VIEWS

MRS. MARY GALAGHER, honorary president Women's Democratic Club of Massachusetts, president of Suffolk County Mothers' Club and president Massachusetts Citizens' Club of Boston Congress should take active steps to remove any law which is not the expression of the people but against the wish of the people. The Volstead act has been in effect long enough to prove its futility as a whole to the Nation. It can never be enforced. Why fool ourselves any longer about it? Thanks to William Randolph Hearst, we may get some action on this matter before long. It always takes just such a champion as this great journalistic leader to direct the destinies of a country's peoples. I wish him well in this great mission of his and agree with him on the question of prohibition modification and a true temperance substitute.

Let us save the youth of the nation and become temperate—not by means of prohibition but by modification and sanity. Women can see that the Volstead act has not abolished liquor. On the contrary conditions are worse immeasurably than before the war and that our citizens are being exposed to ten times the danger of 15 years ago. Beer and wine spell safety for children. I say this as a mother and one vitally interested in the great question of prohibition. In my various activities I have had occasion to meet many of the complexities presented by the problem. I now am ready and willing to go on record as disfavoring prohibition and declaring that it is doing no good. The overwhelming lawlessness which has taken hold of our country today is a direct resultant of the evils of prohibition.

ASKS TRUE TEMPERANCE

SIDNEY T. MILLER, Detroit attorney, father-in-law of Gen. William Mitchell—The winner of the William Randolph Hearst $25,000 prize for the best suggestion for a practical substitute for prohibition, to bring about true temperance, undoubtedly will produce some of the greatest semi-politico State papers in the nation's history.

Any change we will see to eliminate these vile conditions will come only after a slow educational process. But the change will not be as slow in coming as we anticipated two years ago. The people are disgusted and aroused and they want to cure present-day evils.

This contest is a good step in the direction of educating the voters.

COUNTER TO WILL

RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD,

Rules and Conditions of Contest

THE purpose of the contest is to obtain a practical plan, as a substitute for prohibition, which will secure better actual temperance conditions, which will be more easily possible of enforcement by State and Federal authorities, which will offer less encouragement to crime and tend less to debauch the public service, and which will not so outrage and violate the fundamental rights and personal liberties of American citizens.

The rules and conditions of the contest are simple and are as follows:

1—Every person is entitled to enter the contest, but no one person may submit more than one plan.

2—The practicable plan proposed as a substitute for prohibition must be set forth in an article containing not more than one thousand words.

3—This contest will close on April 30, 1929, and no plan which has not been mailed and postmarked on or before that date will be considered.

4—The articles submitted in the contest will be judged by a committee of eminent Americans, the personnel of the committee to be announced at a later date.

5—The full prize of $25,000 will be awarded to the contestant submitting the best plan as a practicable temperance substitute for prohibition.

6—If other plans not awarded the first prize shall still be considered worthy of some compensation by the committee, a second prize of $5,000 and other prizes of $1,000 each may be awarded.

7—Articles submitting a plan to be considered in this contest may be sent to the Temperance Contest Committee, care of the editor of any one of the following Hearst newspapers: Albany Times-Union, Atlanta Georgian, Baltimore News, Boston Evening American, Chicago Herald and Examiner, Detroit Times, Los Angeles Examiner, New York American, Omaha Bee-News, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Rochester Journal, San Antonio Light, San Francisco Examiner, Syracuse Journal, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Washington Herald, Wisconsin News (Milwaukee).

(If you have no objection to publication of your plan, please write "May print" in upper left hand corner of first page.)

San Francisco, former ambassador to Italy, noted writer and lecturer: Mr. Hearst's prize for the best practical plan for temperance is the most intelligent of offers, because it does not limit the thought, it will stimulate both the dry side and the wet side. It opens the way to a plan which may rest upon the social will of the people. The present law, with its imperfect and crime-breeding enforcement, has the advantage of giving those who would like to squeeze into one's own moral wine press other human beings, a holy or unholy satisfaction, according to how you view it.

It may please the industrialists who believes that the working man drinks less and works more, and it should not offend those who want to drink, because there is everywhere plenty at a fairly stable price—high enough, however, to make the bootleg industry stand up as one of the great modern national enterprises of all times. There is something unwholesome in American life that we never felt before. A good suggestion is worth the price. I am sure, however, that a suggestion to be a good one, must recognize that between a law on a statute book, or even a constitution, and the true social will of a people, it is the social will which stands as master.

No law is a living law which runs counter to the will of the people, for under our concept of government, the social will is the only fountainhead of law. Prohibition embarked as on a new excursion in government. Broadly speaking, it took our government beyond the machinery of law-making and put it into the new business of issuing commandments. That is a department which none of the framers of America contemplated—especially when it tends to centralize great power over the individual in the federal government instead of leaving it to the community, where in American tradition it belongs.

MUST BE EDUCATED

ALEX DOW, president of the Detroit Edison Company and president of the Detroit Board of Water Commissioners: The Hearst temperance prize contest will have an everlasting effect on the history of America, because of the widespread publicity which the Hearst newspapers will give to the winning monograph. I don't believe that any real cure for prohibition conditions will ever be delevoped, except by practical means. People must be educated to the evil results of the excessive use of alcohol and to understand the evils which have resulted from prohibition. The Hearst contest will be of great good in the education of citizens in all sections of the United States to one set of standards.

CHAPTER 1

SHE whirled up reluctantly from some deep undertow of sleep, clutching backward at the ghost of a vanishing dream. For a time she lay half awake, the tide of drowsiness lapping at her senses, washing over her in a delightful languour.

Often before Mary Smith had awakened in her luxurious room in the Ring mansion on Fifth Avenue always with a longing for the simple home in Michigan which she had left to visit her rich Uncle Sherwood and his family. But now she did not think of home or Daddy Bill; she had a premonition that something was wrong in the big house.

Slipping into a wrapper she took a small revolver from the drawer of her dresser and cautiously made her way to the library. There she saw a ring of light against the door of the safe and slender fingers working at the combination.

She turned on the switch and a man stood revealed with an amazing thatch of fiery red hair. He wheeled.

"As you were!" she snapped. "Put 'em up—higher. For goodness' sake, where's your mask?"

His back still was toward her, but he stood before a full length mirror—it was Aunt Julia's fancy to sprinkle the house with mirrors—and, looking over his shoulder, she saw that he was young. Long, lean lines, a cedar like the hand she had watched in the ray of the torch; a keen, rather handsome face sneering into the glass; sullen, copper-colored eyes.

"What's your name, lady?" growled the red haired boy.

"Well, I'll tell you. If it wouldn't be too much bother I'd like to hear about you"

"What you want to know about my racket for?"

"You—your 'racket'?" She gurgled with pleasure. "How did you start? What was your family like? Do you do this for a living? Oh, I'd love to hear all about it!"

From his halting words, often meaningless to her, she put together a set of pictures. A slum child stealing peanuts from the stand on the corner; the boy, still older, turning up his nose at the "dip" class—the pickpockets—because they were "rats"—entering the higher circle of the pickups. A guy had to have nerve to be a first-class stick-up.

His father! Stared out a wistful hand but died in fail.

"And your mother?"

Something twisted across his features, a white agony it seemed to Mary, that tore at her throat. She said, quickly, "I'm sorry. Never mind that.

"If I let you go," she asked firmly, "will you get yourself a job and live like an honest citizen"

He glanced up quickly, white, even teeth flashing in a smile. "Not a chance, kid. This is my racket and I stick to it. That goes, see?"

"Well," she went on thoughtfully, "I sort of think you're too good for this. Maybe I'm wrong, but I think there's fine stuff in you somewhere. When you go out take the front entrance and maybe I'll see you again sometime.

Mary Rates Self Far Below the Beautiful and Blonde Iris

He was moving toward the door and suddenly he was gone.

Mary stopped on her way back upstairs. There was a light in Iris Ring's room, late as it was. Mary dropped in. "Busy, dear?" she asked, sitting on the bed. "What cheer?"

The fair girl drew her face into a wry burlesque of its own beauty. "Don't be so optimistic, darling cousin," she sneered in a lazy voice. "There ain't no cheer. Not so much as a thrill in New York any more."

"Oh, isn't there?" The little, olive-tinted face flushed and sparkled. But she did not say anything about the midnight intruder with the red hair

Mary considered herself a field flower compared with Iris whose fair beauty was arresting. She asked her now, "Why don't you and Cosmo Sneddon get on? Don't you intend to marry him?"

"Oh, I suppose so—some day," laughed Iris. "Dad expects it—it's a sure thing Junior won't marry—anyway husbands aren't as permanent as they were."

Mary said good night a little sadly. She did not see her cousin until the next afternoon and then Iris in great excitement told her they were going slumming to The Emerald, a cafe in Harlem with a reputation for underworld toughness.

On the same evening preceding the arrival of the society slummers, Mr. Danny Mulkins, alias the Spook, a slender youth with fiery red hair, slipped into a corner of the cafe and held conversation with divers gunmen and members of the gang he ruled.

To him came Nell Cody with the information that Coky Jones wanted to be taken back. "Listen," said Danny, "I have no dame in my gang"

Nell left him to resume her gyrations on the dance floor and the Spook lifting his eyes saw the girl who had freed him last night entering the door and with her a radiant creature escorted by two men in evening clothes. The Spook's eyes remained on Iris. A thrill went through him

It was then Mary caught a flash of incredible redness and found herself looking straight into the face of her burglar. She saw the long hands on tense on the table before him, judged that he was about to bolt. A taut, shocked sensation made her breath giddy and the room whirled. She closed her eyes—waited for something to happen—hoped whatever it was would not be too violent.

But nothing happened. And in a minute she stole another look and saw he was not going to bolt after all but was quite at ease, talking to the girl in the wilted green chiffon. When her glance crossed his again he seemed not to see her.

With drunken hilarity Junior Ring escorted Nell Cody to the table where Iris and Cosmo Sneddon and Mary sat and solemnly introduced them

"Who is that man with the gorgeous red hair?" asked Iris of Nell. "Have him brought over please."

Nell glanced slant-wise under her lashes and Mary saw the green eyes smoulder. But she made a gesture and he came. Lithely, with a lilt running through his tall figure, the incandescent look about his head, he came.

He was introduced to Mary last and for the second time she saw his smile flash. But even as she muttered, "Mr.—uh—Mullins—" she observed that he was looking at Iris.

The next morning Mary slept till nearly noon and scolded herself when she finally awakened. "Getting as disquieted as these society bores," she grumbled. "Fly by night and sleep by day. Why, didn't you call me, Blessing?" she asked the middle aged woman who had come on with her from Michigan

Blessing shook a gray head and spread Mary's breakfast on the table. "You thinking we'll all come to grief if we stay long. The go bugs-on of them! Now drink your coffee, baby, and eat a bite. I not have you getting the scrawny look of your cousin."

Mary thought a lot about the Spook but the Spook thought only of Iris. He was thinking of her in his room in Ma Cleary's lodging house when Nell Cody came to warn him against Coky. One of the gang called the sleek wanted him back. Danny listened in silence and passed the word on to Ma Cleary to keep her eyes open.

Then he met Coky himself, a spidery creature with an insane eye. Danny glanced at his ghastly face: "Beat it Coky an' see you make it, live."

The spidery man's lips twitched. "I'll get you, fella—get you for this—"

The Spook did not underestimate the threat. He was thinking about it when he arrived at the Emerald and went to an upstairs room where the mob was assembled, busily planning a bank hold up with mathematical precision.

They hailed him joyously, especially Spike O'Rourke: "Sit down Danny, we'll go over this again."

They spread on the table a big square of paper traced with lines which proved to be a map of an upper East Side neighborhood, and ran a pencil down one side.

"Here's the East River and the Harlem. And here—" marking a cross at an intersection, "is the bank. The wagon rolls up seven minutes after twelve with this hundred grand payroll. Of course them three big factories pay by check but you don't need to know nothing about that; the dough stays in

DEATH ENDS HONEYMOON AS SNOW BLOTS OUT TRACKS OF SLAYER

'I KNOW I SHALL BE HAPPY,' WROTE BRIDE OF 3 DAYS

The end of the honeymoon ...
Five short days of fair ... then the long ...
The short days of ... and ...
cver as if ...

And the same snow that flutter down to cover the still form ... resident in the Hingham ... fields blotted out everything ... and there ... trace ...

It was but ... when ... when ... and Cora Jacques stood hand in hand in ... Rita's Chapel in Lowell and were married.

Yesterday ... fur-clad body of the woman found ... the night was identified as that of the bride slain by a near husband ... Today the ... was ... murder.

WOMAN IN GRAY

Also today there was a hunt for a motive.

There was a vague "woman in gray" ...

Sometimes it is "a woman in black."

Then come clues ... chasing ... automobiles, hurryings and scurryings along indefinite lanes, questionings and baffled shrugs.

The murder ... was ... by ... by life or death, joy or sorrow, it turns up all in "better or worse" ... declared to have fought a rifle and now is reported missing.

By inference is accusation, but as yet there is no charge. And in full justice, there should be none until the full and convincing evidence is presented if ever.

SAW HAPPINESS

In a letter written just after the quiet wedding, the murdered bride confided to members of her family:

"I know Chris and I will be extremely happy."

That was written just after her wedding—three days after ... was to ... Hingham ... and ... Jacques ... when it is ... married.

"The act of a crazy man or a fiend," declared one sister of the girl.

But none could call up reckoning that of a "crazy man or a fiend" connected with Cora's life and none could give reason why the five-day bride should be in a spot so isolated, unless she was carried there.

SISTER ACCUSES

Straight accusation was made today by Mrs. Blanche LaRock, sister of the slain woman, against the missing bridegroom.

"I hope they find Cullen dead," she sobbed. "I hope he shoots himself ... I ... I ... and if ... would be better for all concerned. His terrible act was that of a fiend, not a ... and ... he knows that he was crazy. Cora was simply too good for him.

"But ... der could not have been as a result of money trouble or family quarrel. I was too familiar with my sister's affairs to think those things could have caused her death. The shooting was the act of a fiend."

SAYS VICTIM WOULDN'T RIDE WITH BRIDEGROOM

From John Donovan of Third st., Nantasket, who was best man at the wedding of Christopher Cullen and Cora Jacques the girl mysteriously slain in Hingham, police learned that she disdained to ride home in the front seat with her husband on the night of their marriage, a week ago yesterday.

This, however, Donovan ascribed to her disinclination to being "kidded" by Donovan and his wife, although at first he thought it "rather funny."

A fellow-worker of Cullen, the Nantasket man declared it was almost impossible for him to believe Cullen was "mixed up in this thing," for he considered the couple genuinely happy.

"Chris was as good as gold," said Donovan. "It's almost impossible for me to believe that he could have any connection with the murder of his wife or be in any way implicated.

"Why, only a week ago last night I was his best man at his wedding, and I rode home from Lowell to Nantasket in his machine. Rode with him and his bride, Mrs. Donovan was with me, too.

"Chris stood up for me when I was married three years ago and at that time he said, 'You'll have to stand up for me when I take the step.'

"I never paid any attention at all to that until about a month ago he came to me at the State reservation and said, 'You better get a suit and get ready. I'm going to be married. I've bought my furniture, and I'm going to have a nice little home down in Weymouth.'

SAID HE LOVED HER

"I said to him, 'Chris, you want to be sure you love the girl before you marry her; you know you can't change your mind afterwards.' I was only kidding him, but he said, 'Of course I love her; she's just the kind of a girl for me. I know she'll make me a good wife.'

"Chris and the girl had been going together for, I think, about two years. They used to go to church together, to the movies and to such affairs as church socials and state outings. They always appeared very attentive to each other, and I never knew or heard of any quarrels between them. This whole thing mystifies me.

"Chris was no fool. He was a smart fellow. At the wedding they were both very happy, and seemed to enjoy being married. They joined in the festivities with the rest at the reception, and had a good time.

"When we were starting home, my wife said to me: 'You'd better sit in the back seat with me.' And being a dutiful husband I started to obey. But the bride said 'Christie,—that's what she called him—Christie, I'll sit with Mrs Donovan in the back seat.' That struck me as being kind of funny but I thought perhaps she didn't want us to be kidding them.

"He drove us to our home on Third st., Nantasket. His wife then got in front with him and they drove away. That was the last time I saw them, or even heard from them—till this happened.

OPPOSED LIQUOR

"When my wife and I went into the house that night I said to her, 'She'll make a swell woman for Chris.' My wife said, 'Yes, he needs someone to help him.'

"Gee whiz, but it's hard for me to believe that Chris Cullen could be mixed up in any way in a thing like this. Chris was terribly opposed to liquor. He did not drink, although at one time I understood he did. He was quite a church member and took particular interest in church activities in Weymouth and Hingham.

"A very good worker he was and I'd say one of the best at the State reservation. I thought that after being married he would be one of those regular stay-at-homes husbands. I never knew him to have any interest in any other girls than the one he married, and I'm almost positive that he never did."

AUTOPSY ON BODY OF SLAIN BRIDE TO BE HELD IN HUB

sure it was Cora that was found dead.

"Agnes fainted and Henry Tobin and Edward O'Connell interon went over to Downing's morgue to look at the body.

Henry Tobin of South Weymouth, a cousin of Christopher Cullen, and Edward "Jock" O'Connell, Cullen's brother-in-law, who first formally identified the body, were greatly shocked by the ex-perience.

The romance of Cora Jacques and "Chris" Cullen came to light bit by bit. Miss Agnes Flynn disclosed that she introduced Cora to Cullen about two years ago, while both girls were working at the Quincy House.

"Cora was rather lonely and as she lived in Lowell and knew nobody down this way, she said she would like to meet someone. Cullen had a car; and, after the introduction, he took her riding and to dances and in that way their courtship began."

Cora wrote to her sister, Mrs Blanche LaRock of Stanford st., Lowell, about her sweetheart.

"He is the only man in the world I ever cared for," she wrote, after she had told her sister that she was going to marry him. "He's a fine young man," she also wrote.

SEEMED HAPPIER

Agnes Flynn said that after Cora met Cullen, she appeared to brighten up and seemed much happier and contented.

Arthur Jacques, the dead girl's brother, did not meet Cullen until the night of the marriage when there was a reception at Mrs. LaRock's home. He was very much impressed by the bridegroom who seemed to give his wife every attention.

Another who attended the reception and testified to the apparent happiness of bride and bride groom was John Donovan of Third st., Nantasket, who was their best man.

Donovan rode to Lowell with Cullen for the wedding, and rode home with him and the new Mrs Cullen. Mrs Donovan accompanied them.

Donovan thought it seemed "funny" when the bride did not ride back to the South Shore that night on the front seat with her husband, but laid it to her dislike of being "kidded" by the Donovans. Cora insisted on sitting in the rear seat with Mrs. Donovan, although the latter suggested that the front seat was her place.

Prior to the marriage, Cora and "Chris" were almost nightly in each other's company, going to the movies, to church socials, to other affairs, and also going auto riding. Their friends believe it likely that their rides often took them to "Lovers' Lane," a favorite spot for sweethearts.

The wedding took place Sunday evening, January 20, in the rectory of St. John's Church, Monmouth rd., in the Pawtuckettville district of Lowell, not far from the house on Stanford st., where Cora Jacques had left home with her sister Mrs. LaRock when in Lowell.

Rev. John J. Powers of St. Rita's Church, who performed the ceremony. The license itself was taken out on January 17 and on the record of it at City Hall appeared the request, "Please omit" a notation usually added when a couple does not desire to have news of the license published in the newspapers.

The license gave the former Miss Jacques' age as 39 and Cullen's 36. It stated that she was the daughter of George H. and Catherine Farnham Jacques, and Cullen the son of John and Honora Cornell Cullen. Her birthplace was given as Lowell and Cullen's as East Weymouth.

CERTIFIED IN RETURN BY LOWELL PASTOR TODAY

A tragic sidelight on the romance and murder of Cora Jacques Cullen, five-day bride, in Hingham, was the filing in Lowell City Hall today of the return certificate of her marriage to Christopher Cullen. This was the first and only official recording of the marriage.

The return was filed by the Rev. John J. Powers of St. Rita's Church, who performed the ceremony. The license itself was taken out on January 17 and on the record of it at City Hall appeared the request, "Please omit" a notation usually added when a couple does not desire to have news of the license published in the newspapers.

MAN KILLED BY B. & M. TRAIN

Edward H Greene, 72, of Walton pk., Melrose Highlands, met death today beneath the wheels of the "Flying Yankee" at Franklin st. crossing of the Boston & Maine Railroad in Melrose Highlands.

According to Frank E Wheeler, crossing tender, Greene walked around the end of the lowered crossing gate and started across the tracks, despite Wheeler's warning shout.

The Boston-to-Portland flyer struck him, threw him a number of feet and then passed over him before the train could be stopped.

AFGHANS CALL KING BACK

Bombay, India, Jan. 28 (AP)—An announcement by the Afghan consulate today said that former King Amanullah of Afghanistan had been recalled to power.

The announcement said:

"The complete loss of officially notified that former King Amanullah V, at the earnest request of the people of Kandahar Farah Herat, Mazar, I Sharif Maimana and Kataghan, and having in view the integrity of the nation has reaccepted the reins of government and the kingdom."

Since Amanullah's loss of the throne January 14 there have been frequent rumors that he was about to return to power. After his left Cabul, the capital, he fled to Kandahar, in the south, and there the Royal Standard broke out from the palace forthwith, indicating that Amanullah still considered himself a factor in Afghan politics.

Nabbed After $19,000 Holdup as Car Skids

Mt. Morris, Mich., Jan. 28 (INS)—After they had successfully held up the Mt. Morris State Bank and escaped with $19,000 in cash today, two bandits, fleeing from the scene in an automobile, skidded into a ditch, one of them being captured and the money recovered.

The captive gave his name as Mike Chulovitch, 22, of Detroit, and declared he did not know the name of his companion, who fled from the wrecked car.

RELIEF FROM HABIT-FORMING LAXATIVES

Sufferers from constipation will welcome a remedy that is made to do more than just relieve immediate symptoms. Thalax—it is called.

Thalax tends to do away with medicine taking. For besides bringing prompt relief, it strengthens and tones the bowels themselves, that their natural action is gradually restored, and after a reasonable time no more medicine should be necessary, except possibly at rare intervals. Thalax puts the into bowel muscles that have been relaxed or weakened by too much drugging.

Take one or two Thalax tablets tonight at bedtime. In the morning you will experience a natural movement, without griping or distress. Use Thalax at intervals until your bowel movements become normal and natural again, then stop using it. The natural bowel action will continue. No habit will be formed. You will experience no harmful after-effects whatsoever. Instead, the relief will be very noticeable and welcome.

Leading druggists everywhere sell Thalax, 50c per bottle of 30 tablets. If your druggist hasn't it, send direct to the makers, K. A. Hughes Company, Boston, Mass.

Veil Leaves Turkey; Becomes 'Whoopee' in Paris

Paris, Jan. 28 (AP)—They may be giving up the veil in Turkey, but they are taking to it in Paris.

"Whoopee" is the new name for smart nine-length veils, which some Parisian women, mostly mannequins so far, are wearing on tight fitting straw or tulle bonnets.

Wire lace, which has a fine thread of horsehair in it, is the material used for the most sensational "whoopee" veils.

Quick relief for COLDS since 1889

Taking no chances with colds

The good ship Lady Arctic shakes and groans as she smashes at the jagged floes. The wind screams at her upperworks. The ice thunders from her bows. Up and back she shuttles in the bitter cold, fighting the frozen seas to keep the lanes of navigation open.

The officers and crews aboard such ice-breakers are picked for courage and hardiness. Yet they take no chances with dreaded colds, as their medicine chests show. Most of them are amply stocked with GROVE'S BROMO QUININE.

At the very first hint of headache, sneezing, feverish condition, chilliness, or dryness in the nose and throat, they promptly take these tiny tablets. They never wait until serious complications develop. They take this remedy noted for rapid results the world over.

The cold is either side-stepped entirely or thrown off quickly, and the system is fortified against grip and influenza .... HOOK AND JAB FOR AMATEUR FIGHTING HONORS IN ARENA TONIGHT

60 BOYS IN TOURNEY AT ARENA

Sumon Pures Are Expected to Furnish Plenty of Action in Big Show

[illegible] Boston Arena on the N[illegible] Association of the A[illegible] of the state [illegible] Massa[illegible] event [illegible] with [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] New England and national champion ships, always outstanding features of the amateur boxing season in the Hub.

On account of the extraordinary list of entries, more than 60 have been received, the boxing committee has decided to start the bouts, instead of 7 p. m. This will give the fellows of the amateur boxing game a chance to get home at a reasonable hour. All the competitors will be on hand at the Arena at 4 p. m. for weighing in, as it is important to get this over with.

While the contests for individual honors will arouse more interest than any tournament with the exception of the nationals, the contest for the club trophy, which will be awarded to the organization scoring the most points, first and second to count, has increased an interest in tonight's event.

TEN CLUBS COMPETE

At least 10 organizations will make a bid for this trophy, which will become the permanent property of the winning club. This is the same system used in track athletics and already it has proved popular. Many clubs have entered full teams of eight boxers in their efforts to bring home the trophy.

In all eight championship classes the entries promise to develop some sterling contests. In addition to all the unsung pure stars of Greater Boston, many newcomers from various sections of the State will make their first appearance in a Hub ring.

And while the entry list proved an entire surprise, judging by the interest manifested by the followers of the unsung pure games, one of the greatest crowds which ever witnessed a local amateur tournament will be on hand at tonight's tournament.

The battle for the heavyweight crown promises to prove one of the keenest competitions of the program. Joe Lillich, Holy Cross mainstay in the Hub ranks, has a smashing hitter with either hand, and it is expected that he will cause considerable trouble for the local heavyweight.

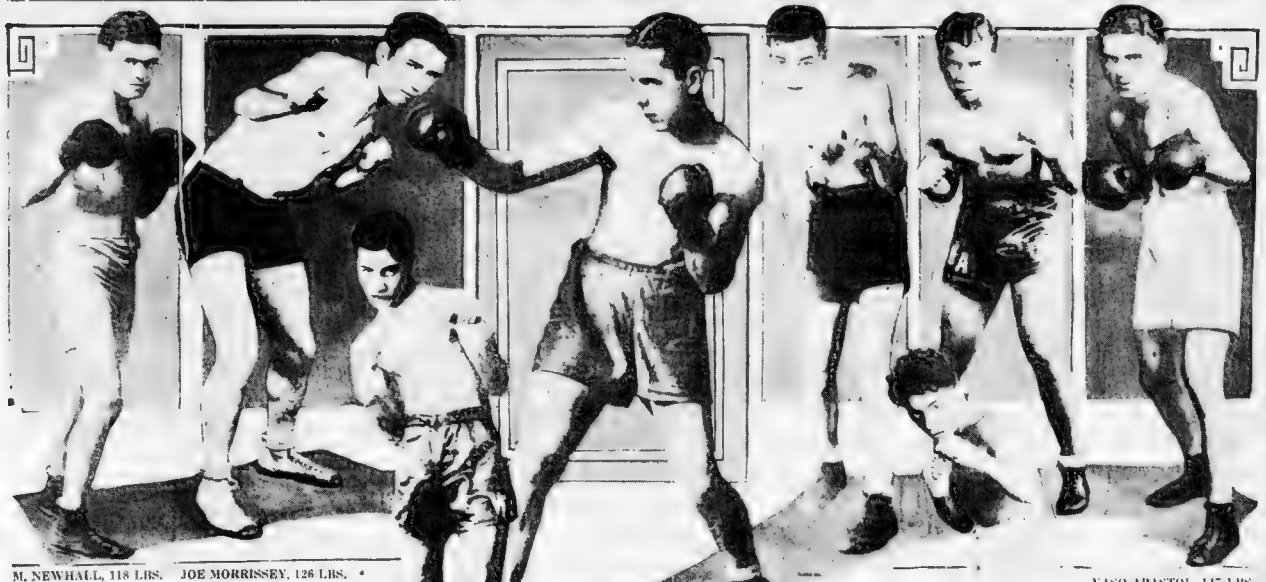
Tom McNeely, the Cambridge bricklayer, and Douglas McKinnon of Quincy, bitter amateur rivals, are expected to meet again tonight. McNeely won a question able decision in their last bout and McKinnon is out to turn the tables.

LANDIS TO COMPETE

Henry Landis of Worcester, Joe Sullivan of Dorchester, and Al Dean of Kelly & Hayes' gym are other heavyweight entrants.

There are six entrants in the light heavyweight class. Harry Allen of the Brockton Eagles will be the favorite, but friends of Tony Cecchini of Charlestown expect him to upset the dope. Joe Fahey of Medford, Andy Johnson of Lynn, Joe Bullock of Everett and Jack Berry of South Boston are other 175 pounders.

Dick Madden of Dorchester and Tiny Lee Lewis of Quincy top a classy list of entrants in the middleweight class, but with many of town stars entered, it is expected that an upset will be registered in this division.



M. NEWHALL, 118 LBS. JOE MORRISSEY, 126 LBS. TED LEKAS, 135 LBS. DICK MADDEN, 160 LBS. VASO APASTOL, 147 LBS.

VIN TRESCOTT, 118 LBS.

(At Top) HARRY ALLEN, 175 LBS. PETE MANGIASE, 112 LBS.

Jeffries-Johnson Clash 'Made' Tex

By JACK LAWRENCE

Copyright 1929 by International Publication, Inc., and New York American, Inc.

TEX RICKARD'S first venture into the fight racket has been described by me

It was the Joe Gans-Battling Nelson battle for the lightweight championship of the world, held at Goldfield, Nevada, in September, 1906.

Rickard, then deeply interested in the exploitation of Nevada mining properties, conceived the idea of staging a fight as a publicity stunt for Goldfield and Tonopah.

He had no idea that it would return a personal profit to him. In fact, he figured on being in a financial position to underwrite a loss.

With $5000 of his own money and $25,000 pledged by prominent mining men of Goldfield and Tonopah, he plunged into the promotion of the fight. And when it was all over he discovered that he could meet all expenses and gain a profit of $13,000 without ever having to put up a dollar in actual cash.

THAT opened Tex Rickard's eyes. He figured, quite correctly, that if a lightweight championship fight could be turned to such profitable account in the wilds of the Nevada desert, a championship bout in any center of population would certainly result in dividends two or three times as great. His subsequent enterprises proved that he was right in his deduction.

But four years were to elapse before he was again to take the helm in putting on a major prize-fight. With his northern saloon and gambling house in Goldfield, and his various mining investments in Nevada, Rickard gave no thought to the boxing game until the Jeffries-Johnson controversy reached a boiling point late in 1909.

Even then Rickard was not enthused because he had a premonition of all sorts of trouble in staging a battle between a white and a black for the heavyweight championship of the world. His premonitions proved to be well founded.

It was the persuasive arguments of a coterie of wealthy Nevada mining men with whom Rickard had been associated that finally moved him to go after the big battle.

THEY told Tex that they would back him financially for anything he needed, as in the case of the Gans-Nelson affair at Goldfield. Rickard's backers in the Jeffries-Johnson project never had to put up a dollar.

The fight, probably the most sensational and picturesque in the history of professional pugilism, paid handsome returns to both the fighters and the promoter, despite the fact that the launching of it was met with the most discouraging setbacks for Tex Rickard.

Probably anyone but Tex Rickard would have abandoned the enterprise when, after investing something like $50,000 in San Francisco, where he was assured the contest could be held, he was informed by the governor of the State that it could not be staged in California.

When this ruinous edict was tossed into his lap Rickard had erected an arena in Frisco at a cost of $35,000 and had invested another $15,000 in other incidental expenses, such as the printing of tickets.

A total of $300,000 worth of these had been sold when the governor informed Rickard that he would have to take his prize fight elsewhere.

THE action of Governor Gillette of California was a victory for the army of reformers who had been trying to prevent the battle from the moment it was announced that the match had been closed.

No fight in history had ever raised such a storm of protests from reformers and social organizations.

Tex Rickard, with his set and emotionless face, took these reverses without a whimper and staged the fight in Nevada, July 4, 1910. It was a huge success and established his name as the greatest boxing promoter of all time.

Once again he was to drop out of the game for a long period, not to take a prominent part in it until he brought Jack Dempsey and Jess Willard together at Toledo for the heavyweight championship of the world.

How Rickard marched on to the million-dollar gate will be told in this week's installments of his biography.

Continued Tomorrow.

Paulino May Meet Christner in N. Y.

New York, Jan. 28 (AP)—Paulino Uzcudun, ex-ranst Tom Heeney, may be matched against K. O. Christner, the tough Akron rubber worker, for a bout in Madison Square Garden, Feb. 22, under revised plans of Tom McArdle, garden matchmaker.

Christner made such a great showing against Jack Sharkey last week that McArdle planned to match him against Heeney, but the New Zealander has not yet made up his mind whether he is coming back to the ring. McArdle now hopes to be able to induce Paulino to accept the bout.

B. C. SIX WORKS OUT AT ARENA FOR BIG GO

Coach Sonny Foley and his Boston College hockey team will get down to hard work again at the Arena today with the objective game with Holy Cross their next ice battle, a week from Wednesday night.

Although the B. C. sextet walloped the B. A. A. in their last game by a score of 2-1, Foley sees plenty of room for improvement. The Eagles will be favored to defeat Holy Cross when the rivals clash, but the B. C. coach is not taking any chances.

Boston College's victory over the B. A. A. was of the lucky variety, although the team looked immense and showed its very best hockey of the current season. Every man on the B. C. squad carried out his assignment to perfection.

Leon Fitzgerald, B. C. goalie, has seldom seen a better night than he did against the B. A. A. But he's an in and outer and unless he's right against the Purple there will be a surprising setback for B. C.

Foley has managed to teach his defensemen one important item, however, and that is body-checking. Both Ed Sliney and Capt. Art Moriarty, 200-pound points, were hitting the B. A. A. men with a vengeance and this wore down the veterans.

Hyatt Leads for Scoring Honors

New York, Jan. 28 (AP)—Charley Hyatt, sharpshooter of the University of Pittsburgh's basketball team, has jumped into the lead for individual scoring honors in the East.

In 11 games Hyatt has tallied 65 field goals and 29 fouls for a grand total of 159 points. Two points back of him comes Joey Schaaf, Pennsylvania captain. Jimmy Collins of St. John's of Brooklyn is third with 145 points and Ed Wineapple of Providence fourth with 134.

Hub Rooters to Back Sharkey at Miami

By JACK CONWAY

JACK SHARKEY, conqueror of K. O. Christner, will leave for his bout with Young Stribling at Miami, Fla., Wednesday night. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Sharkey, Johnny Buckley, his manager; Mrs. Buckley and Al Lavey, his trainer.

Tony Falazola of New Orleans, Lavey's assistant, is already on his way to Miami to get Sharkey's training camp ready. He left New York last night and will arrive in Miami tomorrow evening.

Sharkey will report at Miami Friday night. This is contingent with the terms of his contract which require him to be in Miami by February 1.

Young Stribling will engage in an exhibition bout in Jacksonville, Fla., this week-end and then hurry on to Miami.

Jack Dempsey has notified Johnny Buckley that he has secured the Miami Kennel Club as a training spot for the Boston heavyweight. It was originally planned to stage the Sharkey-Stribling match on the grounds of the Kennel Club, but in view of the great interest in the match an arena will be built on one of the Miami golf courses. The arena will cost $75,000, according to Cyclone Bill Cayley of the Garden forces. The City of Miami will not charge any rental for the use of the golf course.

SHARKEY will take things easy for the first 10 days he is in Miami, as he is already in excellent physical condition as a result of his hard battles with Arthur De Kuh and K. O. Christner.

The Sharkey program for the Stribling bout has been much the same as the one leading up to the clash with Harry Wills which established the Boston heavyweight as an international ring figure. Sharkey first kayoed Riverberri at Newark. Riverberri was a big, tough fellow like DeKuh. Jack then upset George Godfrey who was strong and a good socker like Christner.

Sharkey was then letter perfect in his boxing for the engagement with Wills.

Johnny Buckley feels Sharkey will be even a better fighter against Stribling than he was when he licked Wills. He has had more than two years of ring experience since the Wills bout and has also developed into a better socker.

Jack Conway

THE Madison Square Garden corporation has forwarded to Buckley transportation for his party to Miami and return. They are anxious to get the Boston heavyweight on the scene of the contest as quickly as possible so as to stimulate interest in the match.

There will be a special section of "Jack Sharkey Rooters" at the ringside at Miami. They will journey to the southern resort in a special train which will leave Hub about February 20 and return here immediately after the contest. The train will be known as the "Eddie Mack Special" as it will be in charge of the energetic matchmaker of the Boston Garden.

Mack has already secured 300 choice ringside seats. He will furnish transportation, ringside tickets and hotel accommodations for the members of his party. Mack is planning to bring along a band and so it will be much like the gang of Royal Rooters who followed Boston baseball teams to Pittsburgh and New York in the days when the Hub had pennant winners.

JOHNNY BUCKLEY has also ordered 500 ringside tickets for New England fans.

Hayden & Stone, which is interested in the Garden, has ordered a large block of tickets. In all the New England ticket sale has already passed the $25,000 mark. The top price for tickets is $25. The other prices are $5, $10, $15 and $20.

ALTHOUGH Sharkey is getting a guarantee of $100,000 regardless of what the show draws, he is anxious that the gate receipts hit a high figure as he wants to prove he is the best box office attraction in the boxing game with the possible exception of Dempsey. Sharkey has already helped to draw $2,000,000 at shows promoted by the Madison Square Garden Corporation.

Stribling is getting 20 per cent out of the Miami fight. With the cost of the arena and other expenses, the show will have to clear $250,000 before it will be out of the red.

Jack Dempsey and his associates in the Miami venture are shooting for a $600,000 gate.

FAST B. C., H. C. MILE TEAMS IN B. A. A. BATTLE

Boston College's one mile relay team, with the first victory of the season under its belt, begins preparations for the most important race of the season to date with Holy Cross at the B. A. A. games next Saturday night.

The Eagle team of Finn, Mulcahy, Woodworth and Bob Sullivan, conquered the University of New Hampshire in the Knights of Columbus meet.

The quartet turned in the fast time of 4 minutes, 32 3-5 seconds, and Mulcahy, who had been ill with the grippe for two weeks, was running his first race of the season.

Jack Ryder was greatly pleased with the showing of his one-milers and has high hopes of defeating Holy Cross at the Unicorn festival. He believes that his team will show further improvement before the time of the race.

Holy Cross' time for the one-mile baton match at the K. of C. games bettered that of Boston College-Harvard, which was defeated by the Purple, pushed the Crusaders harder than New Hampshire did the Eagles.

The H. C. team of John Chenitz, Tom Perry, Matt Tierney, brother of the famous Joe of the N. Y. A. C., and Harold Klumbach, is one of the best in the East, and looms as possible intercollegiate champions.

Holy Cross and Boston College thrilled the New York fans at the Brooklyn College games, and the race before Boston fandom next Saturday night should be just as exciting, for the addition of Mulcahy has given B. C. enough speed to beat the Purple.

B. U. SEXTET TO PLAY BOWDOIN FEBRUARY 9

The fact that the B. U. ice team was going out of its field in not meeting any college opponents on the Canadian trip, and that inability of Coach Wayland Vaughan to accompany the team influenced the council in its decision to keep the new home Vaughan teaches history at the College of Liberal Arts and was unable to get away for a week.

The next game on the schedule is with Bowdoin at Brunswick, Me., February 9. The Pioneers took their Maine rivals into camp at the Arena a month ago by a 4-1 count and are anxious to repeat.

Practice was resumed at the Arena last Thursday morning and will be held daily from now until the next game. Capt. Hod Gibson has decided to remain in college until June and will therefore take his customary place in the lineup for the remainder of the season.

Gibson is the keystone to the Pioneer defense which has shown to such advantage this winter.

B. U. is enjoying the best season in its history on the ice this winter but the boys must travel at top speed in order to take Brown, Bowdoin, Boston College, Holy Cross and the B. A. A. into camp during the month.

Dartmouth and B. U. were regularly scheduled to meet at Hanover January 26, but this game was called off as it came in the midst of the examination period at both colleges. No new date has been arranged as yet, but may be in the near future.

Mass. Aggies Get Easy Week on Court

Amherst, Jan. 28—A welcome respite for the hard-working Mass Aggie varsity basketball quintet is promised the coming week as but one game, a tilt with Stevens Tech in the drill hall Saturday night, is scheduled.

Without the services of their little captain, Reddie Ellert, and without their regular center, Stanuszewski, for most of the week, the Aggies with a makeshift lineup in practically every game, has put up gam exhibitions, holding the Dashy Williams quintet to five baskets from the floor and topping Worcester Tech Thursday night in a thrilling contest that called for four five-minute overtime periods.

On Tech's last visit to M. A. C two years ago, the Aggies won in an overtime period, 24-17.

8 Below Fails To Halt Snowshoers

St Johnsbury, Vt., Jan. 28 (AP)—With the temperature at eight degrees below zero, seven contestants in the international snowshoe race from Montreal to Lewiston, Me., left St Johnsbury at 9 o'clock today for Lancaster, N. H., a distance of 29 miles.

Jean Duchaste of Montreal, who has led the race since the start, estimated he would make the distance today in five and a half hours. He was in perfect condition when he arrived here from Montreal yesterday after traveling 35 miles. His time was seven hours and five minutes. Joseph Gagne of Valleyfield, Que., was second yesterday and Wilfred Dupre of Manchester, N. H., third.

Providence Downs J. and P. Coats Team

Providence, Jan. 28—The Providence soccer club uncovered a slashing attack to register a 3-to-0 victory over J. and P. Coats, its arch rival, at Kinsley Park.

17 School Teams In Husky Meet at "Y" on Saturday

MEDFORD RUNNERS STRONG

Speedy Schoolboys Challenge Records in Northeastern Meet at "Y" Gym

By DICK McSWEENEY

Attention of the schoolboy track world is focussed on the Northeastern Interscholastic meet, held next Saturday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. gym on Huntington ave.

This year, there are 17 high school teams entered in the meet as against 11 entered last year.

Medford, Quincy, Winthrop, Lynn Classical, Concord, Woburn, Brockton, B. C. High, Lowell, Newton, Lawrence, Beverly, Searles high of Methuen, Salem, Boston Trade, Brookline and Watertown are the schools which participate in next Saturday's meet.

Lowell and Woburn sent in their entries late because of the fact that the athletes at these schools had not received their scholastic rating and therefore were left in the dark as to their eligibility to compete until the last minute.

The events will be run off as follows: Forty-five yard dash, trial semifinal and final heats; 300-yard dash, trial heats; 45-yards low hurdles, trial, semifinal and final heats; 1000-yards run; 200-yards dash, finals; 60-yards run; relay races; running high jump, and 12-pound shotput.

TRY TO PREVENT JAMS

In both the 600 and 1000-yards events two heats will be run, on a time basis, in order that the track may not be jammed.

Only one started from each school is to be allowed to compete in the 300, 600 and 1000. In all the other events two starters from each school may participate.

It has been attempted to stage relay races between natural rivals, such as Lawrence and Lowell, Winthrop and Beverly, Brockton and Newton will oppose each other in the relay, as will Medford and Lynn Classical.

Brockton has entered Kenton Farrell, Joseph Paterno, Orie Quinlette and James Doherty in the 45-yard dash. Paterno played football at Brockton high this fall, and used his sprinting ability to advantage when carrying the pigskin.

GRID STAR IN DASH

Medford high is another school which is sending a speedy football star to compete in the dash William "Bud" Lacasse, being the star in question. Morse and Donahue will also run for the Blue and White in this event.

Sam Pincatio is Beverly's entrant in the dash.

B. C. high sends Bobbie Ott and Hill, while Lynn Classical will be represented by Badger, Collins, Davis and Marlinski.

Flannery and Cunningham will run for Concord, and Joe Conners, Art Lewis and Jack Whelan will wear the Lawrence colors.

Newton has four entrants who can be counted on to make a creditable showing: Ewing, Pescosolido, Bell and Quinnian.

Quincy sends Marland and Leone while Methuen will cheer for Bob Jordan and Edgar Vire.

Watertown's dash entrants are Parker Nally, Sebastian Curcio, Lee Keely and Gelbaty.

ONE BRIGHTON ENTRY

Brighton has but one entrant, Constantino Satchebell, who made a fine showing in the Brighton-East Boston meet recently.

Winthrop's dash trio is composed of Boyle, Egan and Lill.

The following names for the 300-yard dash have been received: James Doherty and Joseph Paterno of Brockton; Flannery, Sullivan and McGrath of Concord; Joseph Dineen and Robert Boyd of Lawrence. Robbins and Harrington of Beverly; Collins, Foster and Badger of Lynn Classical; Mullen, Quigley and Bell of Newton; J. Boyle of Winthrop; Andrews, Miller and Allen of Medford; Richard Davis and Russell Kumpis of Watertown; Edgar Vire, Joseph Wolfindale and Thomas Bruce of Methuen; Blake and Kirkland of Quincy.

Entrants in the 45-yard low hurdles are: Kenton Farrell and Orie Quilette of Brockton; McGrath, Kelley and Flannery of Concord; Nicholas Gradual, Fred Barone and Arthur Law of Lawrence; Steptoe and O'Brien of B. C. high; Reynolds, Carter and Pine of Newton; Lill of Winthrop; Fraser Donath and Shea of Medford; Sebastian Curcio and William van Keuren of Watertown.

1000-YARD ENTRIES

Although only one competitor from each school will be allowed to run in the 1000, some of the schools have entered three men. Concord sends Robinson, Culkins and Williams; Lynn Classical has Fallon, Carlynn and Keeley; while Newton has entered Burton, Chamberlain and Hall.

O'KELLY IS REAL MENACE FOR MALONEY

Lured into the ring by the promise of the largest gate since the opening of the new Boston Garden, "Dynamite Jim" Maloney, South Boston heavyweight, for the first time since he started his comeback campaign eight months ago, regards his approaching encounter with Con O'Kelly, Irish champion, with certain misgivings, and only the promise of a record gate prevailed upon the South Boston man to accept this match.

For many weeks Maloney gracefully sidestepped this meeting with O'Kelly. Following the draw these rivals fought in Madison Square Garden, the idol of the Peninsula district simply didn't want to meet the red-headed Irishman. For weeks it seemed as though this match flopped, and Promoter Ed ue Mack of the Garden had given up all hopes of clinching this heavyweight feature.

In fact, the Hub promoter had practically clinched matches for O'Kelly with Leo Lonski and Max Schmelling when Maloney fell into line and agreed to go through with this match. He simply couldn't endure to allow such a big gate to get out of his grasp.

Yet, while Maloney has accepted the bout, he regards it with fear, and for this reason he started early training for the encounter in order to be in the best possible condition for the fray. Maloney tipped the scales at 198 pounds when he met O'Kelly in New York and he blames his added weight for his failure to win. The South Boston man can hope to weigh 190 pounds when he steps into the ring next Friday night.

But O'Kelly, with his flaming red hair and his Shamrock green tights, is coming to the Hub confident that he will crush Maloney to the mat this time. The Irish champion points out that he was hardly acclimated when he met Maloney before.

Promoter Mack has completed a part of the preliminary card. In the semifinal Vincent Feglone, sensational Philadelphia fighter, will meet Arthur Flynn of Lawrence. Feglone has beaten Cuban Bobby Brown, Babe McGrane, Jack McVey, Phil Kaplan and fought two spectacular bouts with Rene De Vos.

Big Boy Rawson of Dorchester local heavyweight, who is fast climbing up the ring ladder, was paired to meet Tiger Tom Dixon of Dover, N. H. in an eight-round bout with Joe Lohan of Arlington will meet Owen Flynn of South Boston. This will be their second meeting.

STATE SQUASH PLAY STARTS

The tournament for the Massachusetts amateur squash racquet championship starts today.

The ruby adopted standard ball will be the official missile in the matches.

Club officials have recognized its protests which have been entered, but they find themselves in an unpleasant position because of the willingness to co-operate with the national body in the efforts that have been made to improve the type of ball used in all action in which the game has been lifted into popularity.

The national body has ruled that the new ball will be official for the forthcoming national championships at New York and the Massachusetts rulers, not wishing to place their players under the handicap of playing with a different type of ball in the State tournament, fell into step.

Experiments here have proved that the skilled players will be pulled back on level terms with ordinary players through the inability to kill the new ball.

Dundee and Mello Clash on March 15

Al Mello and Joe Dundee will clash in a return bout at the Boston Garden at a society charity boxing show on March 15.

Max Waxman, Dundee's manager, has virtually agreed to all terms for the tussle.

It will be another over-weight match, and so Dundee's title will not be at stake.

Waxman says he has not yet closed for a title skirmish between Dundee and Jackie Fields in New York.

In the event Dundee risks his championship against Mello in the Boston ring, the show will not be staged until the summer. It will be staged at Braves Field in such an event.

Seek Opponent for Ace Hudkins

Las Vegas, Nev., Jan. 28 (AP)—Ace Hudkins, middleweight boxing title contender, today was under contract for a "fight with any fighter" here July 4. The contract calls upon him to meet Mickey Walker, titleholder, but Walker has not yet agreed to the bout and Hudkins gave his consent to the substitution of any boxer in his class.

MR. BOSTON

By Jack Conway

It has been a habit with Mr. Boston to visit the dressing room of the defeated boxer. The veteran probably figures the winner is sure to have plenty of handshakers on hand. So it was only natural he found his way to K. O. Christner's quarters following the Sharkey scrap in New York.

Christner, naturally, was a little bit low in spirits after having lost the decision to Sharkey. As K. O. finished dressing, the door of his dressing room shot open and Jack Sharkey entered. He ran over to the King of the Akron tire pits and grasped him by the hand.

"I like to shake hands with a real fighter," chirped Sharkey. "You sure did give me a tough fight. You had me dizzy in the third round from one of your right hand clouts. I had to show everything I had in the fighting line to win. Stick at the racket, K. O., and you'll make a lot of money. You'll knock out most of the heavyweight contenders."

Christner stood there with the eyes fairly popping out of his head.

"Thanks very much," he finally said. "When I came to New York I thought you were swell headed, a gabby bird and over rated. I want to tell you Jack what they told me of you was all lies.

"You treated me fine in the ring. You didn't take advantage of me in the first round when I didn't realize the fight was on and stood like a goop in my corner with my back toward you. You also stepped back several times when I got tangled up in the ropes. I hope you go on to win the heavyweight championship."

The big fellows shook hands again.

"Be sure and stick to the racket and make a lot of money for yourself, the wife and the kids," said Sharkey as he breezed out of the dressing room.

MR. BOSTON said Christner he was much impressed by his punching power, aggressiveness and courage.

"I'm glad you liked my work," said K. O. "For years I had a tough fight to get enough money each week for the rent and the grub. I'm married and besides my wife I have two youngsters. I'm 34 now. My army discharge papers have me down as 35, but I gave my age as a year older in the army so as to get in a particular branch of service.

"I engaged in my first pro fight a year ago last New Year's. My ring earnings have enabled me to purchase a little house out in Akron, pay for my furniture and also for an acre of land. Now I can make some real money. I'm going to follow Sharkey's advice and stick to the racket."

MR. BOSTON asked Christner if appearing for the first time in a New York ring had awed him in the least.

"I didn't mind New York," he replied frankly. "I was concerned, though, over Sharkey. I knew he was rated as the best of the active heavyweights. I was also told he would try and bull me and talk me to death in the ring.

"He didn't say a word during the fight. The first time he talked to me was after the bell rang for the end of the final round. He rested his gloves on my shoulders and said:

"'You did fine, Christner. Stick to the racket and make some dough.'

"SHARKEY was too good a boxer for me. I couldn't get many good belts at him as he kept moving out of the way of my punches. But I guess none of the boys are punching Jack around much.

"I thought the fight was very even until the end of the fifth round. In the last round I got the finish frame. Sharkey scored with a terrific right hand uppercut to the chin. I'll admit it rocked me. From then on the fight seemed to go Sharkey's way, but I kept trying all the time in the hope I would score a knockout. I had several chances, but other than once in the third round I couldn't wallop him flush on the button. I shook him up, I think, in the third round, but he came back fighting.

"I INTEND to take on anybody the promoters pick for me. Next time I hope my opponent won't be quite as fast as Sharkey. Then you'll see me put across my kayo smash."

A BUNCH of Christner rooters from Akron then filed into the dressing room and plitted K. O. They were an enthusiastic lot. All through the fight they kept calling:

"They would have made the trip South with Christner if any fighter other than Sharkey had been in the Garden ring the other night," remarked Mr. Boston. "Make no mistake. This Christner person is a tough hombre with a heart as big as the Custom House and could stand a punch almost as powerful as the one packed around by Dempsey."

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

Acquisition of Bill Carson by the Bruins brings to Boston one of the greatest natural goal getters in hockey.

Carson has not been playing up to standard this season but trouble with Connie Smythe.

It has been a well known fact to all season that the former University of Toronto player desired to get away from the Maple Leafs.

Three weeks ago the prediction that Bill Carson would become a member of the Bruins was made in this column. Connie Smythe wanted a left winger and wisely announced that he would trade Percy Galbraith, all the time with his mind made up to get Eric Pettinger. The Bruins refused to part with Galbraith but gave Smythe the player he discovered and desired, Pettinger.

Now that Bill Carson has joined the fold, Dutch Gainor will be moved out to left wing, and the center ice work will be left in the hands of Carson and Cooney Weiland. What two could form a sweeter pair?

Any player who can offer the article of hockey shown by Red Green, who was loaned to the Rhode Island Reds by the Bruins, against the Tigers, has no business in any minor league.

Although Manager Jimmie Gardiner has one of the finest aggregations ever gathered under a minor league seal, a team which can rightfully be called an all star club, Red Green, a complete stranger, stepped in and proved a sensation.

For some unknown reason, Red Green was not allowed to make good with the Bruins. He was used on but rare occasions, and for that reason the Boston fans never had a chance of seeing the real Red Green in action.

Nevertheless, he was a great favorite with the local followers of hockey, who do not look with favor upon the leasing Boston, especially as he was never given an honest chance to make good.

There is no sport offering such an opening as hockey gives for a manager to show up a player, who was brought to a club without his approval. All this type of manager has to do is to keep the player, who is to get the works out of the game for a couple of weeks and then send him in. Due to lack of condition, the player cannot be anything but a flop.

The announcement made by the Bruins was to the effect that Red Green loaned to Providence because the Rhode Island team was short of left wings. Hago Harrington is out with a poisoned leg, and Glory Hart in bed with the flu.

Due to a Canadian American League rule, Red Green must stay with Providence for at least three weeks or all games in which he participates will be forfeited.

Before the Tiger game, Judge Dooley of the Reds conversed with Pres. Charles F. Adams on the telephone and arranged for Red Green to stay with Providence for the time required by the league. If Green is on the market, and there is every reason for such a belief, as he has been offered to Toronto and Pittsburgh, Providence would gladly listen to a proposition.

The railroading of Red Green recalls to mind that Jerry Geran and Hago Harrington, two American-born players, received the same kind of a deal from the Bruins.

This Pie Is Delicious

HERE'S A PIE THAT'S EASY TO MAKE AND ECONOMICAL—MARTHA LEE

AS sweet as the corn from which it is made is the golden corn oil and corn syrup that form the two principal ingredients of the delicious butterscotch pie illustrated today. This pie is an excellent dessert—a dessert which you can freely serve because it is easily digested, wholesome and healthful.

If you prefer a pie of light color you can use the corn syrup that has the red label, or if you desire a darker pie, use the corn syrup with the blue label. Here is the formula:

BUTTERSCOTCH PIE—Three whole eggs well beaten, ½ c. sugar, 3 tbsp. corn oil, 1 c. of corn syrup (light or dark), 1 tsp vanilla, dash of salt.

Mix the ingredients well. Bake a pie shell slightly—just enough to set it. Add the pie mixture and cook slowly 40 or 50 minutes. If liked, one cup of chopped pecans can be added to the pie before baking. A meringue will add to its appearance and taste also.

For the meringue beat two egg whites stiffly, adding gradually two tablespoons of sugar and a pinch of baking powder. Pile this lightly on the pie and brown very slowly for 8 to 15 minutes.

Corn syrup, as you probably know, is one of the most nourishing and healthful foods. As it contains a large amount of dextrose the food element which is directly "taken up" by the blood and supplies heat and energy to the body.

This syrup was selected by food experts as one of the seven vital foods necessary to restore thousands of starving Near East orphans to health and strength.

Corn oil, too, is a favorite with particular housewives for deep frying, sauteing, shortening and salad dressings. If you like corn on the cob, you will like corn oil, for it is fresh from the hearts of golden corn. It is economical to use, too, and, best of all, can be used over and over again.

Shall I send you an attractive recipe book featuring both these wholesome products?

This Pineapple Sundae Sauce Is Delicious

Time for combining ingredients, five minutes; time for cooking, 15 minutes. Makes six servings. Now here's a recipe that makes it possible for you to have a pineapple sundae at your home just as it is served at the country's finest soda fountains. You need: 1 can crushed pineapple, ½ c. of granulated sugar and ½ c. of water.

Boil the last 2 ingredients. Then cool it a bit. Now you have what the soda fountains call a true fruit syrup. Pour over vanilla or chocolate ice cream. Serve with wafers or cake.

"DEAR MISS RICE: I am an elderly working woman of fifty, left to orphan very young and brought up by a relative who allowed me little freedom or intercourse with others. Would I account for my solitary nature? When a younger woman, am at line of employment would I have made a success.

"MARGARET S., Watertown."

The first thing I am going to do is to protest about the word which you use. Elderly—at fifty? The first thing you need is to take a different attitude toward this one fact. Yes, I suspect that your early training had a good deal to do with the way you feel about this. But I am a foe to the idea that because something happened before it is always timely. It has to cast a long shadow over all our lives.

a working woman of plain, shy young and mature who allowed

It is one of the most pernicious doctrines ever put out by science, this idea that childhood settles everything for the adult life.

What does affect the adult life is the attitude of mind, and it is this at which I am always pounding against which I am always fighting—the attitude which accepts what Old Man Life tries to hand out.

He is a sort of grim practical joker, is the Old Man. If you slap away the hand which holds the mean gift he is apt to slyly bring out the other from behind his back, in which there is something at least halfway decent.

This Bath Is Cheap

HERE'S a marvelous beauty bath that's cheap. Simply swish a few handfuls of a special starch in a basin of warm water, then wash your hands, using a little soap. Soon as your hands come in contact with the water you are aware of a smoothness like rich cream—and after you dry your hands, INSTANTLY your skin feels soft and smooth as a rose petal.

That is also the immediate and startling effect of this wonderful starch in your bath. Merely dissolve half a package or more of the starch in your tub, bathe as usual—and then feel your skin.

The satiny smoothness that you feel after this beauty bath comes from a thin layer of starch that is left on the skin. This almost invisible "coating" absorbs perspiration, eliminates shine from the skin and, in case of irritation, is most soothing.

Starch from corn is the main ingredient of this finer starch. Being a vegetable product, it contains no mineral properties to irritate the skin.

A CHARMING AFTERNOON DRESS

6371 Printed silk was used for this attractive model. The upper part of the waist portions are joined to the lower part in split curves. Similar shaping is shown at the joining of the flare skirt to the slip yoke. The sleeve is close fitting and finished with a flare insert below the elbow. Rayon, celanese, pointed chiffon and velvet are all suggested for this style.

The pattern is cut in 3 sizes: 36, 18 and 20 years. To make this design for an 18-year size will require 3¼ yards of 36-inch material. The width of the flare at the lower edge with fulness extended is 2 yards.

Pastor Praises Modern Parents

Far from being on its way to the bow wows, the modern home is away ahead of any home of the same class in by-gone centuries, in the opinion of Dr. James G. Gilkey, noted Springfield pastor, addressing the Hepteran Club in Somerville.

Furthermore, it is cruel and unjust to blame the modern parent for new problems created by the amazing prosperity of this country, he insisted.

"In spite of new and baffling situations and perennial problems that emerge generation after generation, many modern parents are doing an immensely creditable piece of work with their children," he said. "We hear today a great deal about the parents and the homes that fail. Parents who assume no responsibility for the moral and religious training of their children, and homes that become little more than eating and sleeping places. But there are millions of homes of a different and finer type.

"Modern parents are certainly giving their children a new and immensely valuable protection against disease, a better start in life, as far as health is concerned, than any homes of bygone days.

"The modern home gives its children contacts with life and people which are far more varied and stimulating because of modern means of communication and transportation.

SEE GREAT GAIN

"A third unmistakable advance recorded by the modern home is less austere family life. Many of us recall, for instance, the foolish prohibitions that were put upon us as children in regard to amusements. Card playing, theaters, visits to the circus surely nothing has been lost by freeing our children from these unhappy relics of a decadent Puritanism. Surely we can be grateful today that most fathers no longer aspire to be the tyrant in the home, or even the benevolent despot.

Dr. Gilkey granted that the modern home still has many problems to solve and weaknesses to correct, and that emancipation from too strict compulsion, even religious training, may have swung too far the other way.

"But a great gain has been made in family life," he declared. "Today our greatest menace is wealth.

"All of us realize that this new wealth has been the undoing of numberless American families. We are all familiar with spectacular cases of extravagance, dissipation and ultimate moral and spiritual decay.

RUINED BY WEALTH

"It remains pitifully true that more people are ruined by wealth than by poverty and that society is renewed at the bottom while it is decaying at the top. As wealth came in the old virtues seem to have gone out. Baffling problems were created for us and even more baffling ones for our children.

"In our healthy, happy, amazingly prosperous environment we must develop by artificial means the virtues which grew naturally in the rough, hard world of the past.

"Let us keep our homes simple. Give children money only when they earn it, or make some return for it. The parents of the past found ways to conquer poverty. We must find ways to outwit wealth."

Sugarless cereal means a fight

A little sweetening does away with an awful lot of trouble

CHILDREN'S meals should not be something to be dreaded. One of the most important of all dietetic problems is to get children to eat enough bone-building, health-promoting foods. Ranking among the highest of foods for children are cereals, and yet, as an eminent food authority recently stated it, "Sugarless cereal means a fight."

He went on to advise mothers to make these necessary foods welcome and even looked forward to by the children through intelligent and judicious sweetening. Sugar in itself is the most perfect fuel to furnish energy for active children, and best of all it makes other necessary foods so easily and gladly eaten.

Children should not dread their meals. The wise mother or nurse, by an intelligent use of sugar, can enable children to receive all kinds of healthful cereals, fruits, vegetables and milk. Properly sweetened cereals also encourage the child to eat more milk. Sugar is Nature's ideal flavor. The Sugar Institute.

Chef Will Tell How

HEAR YE—All ye New England homemakers who are interested in expert cookery. Come to the Martha Lee kitchen on Wednesday to see August Dubendorfer, of the Hotel Statler, prepare and serve several famous Statler specialties.

Mr. Dubendorfer, a native of Switzerland, served his apprenticeship in Switzerland and Holland. He came eight years ago to the Hotel St. Regis and the Vivoin Restaurant in New York. He has been on the staff of Statler chefs since the opening of this popular hotel, two years ago, and you may be sure that the lessons which he will give will be unusually valuable and interesting.

Among the dishes prepared will be Swedish Loaf, Fillet of Boston Sole Miami, beef tenderloin saute bouquetiere, garnished with fresh mushrooms, other fresh vegetable including potatoes Parisienne, and fancy tea sandwiches.

Mr. Dubendorfer, with his excellent knowledge of the English language, will be very glad to answer questions on the culinary art of which he is so complete a master.

The Hotel Statler needs no introduction to members of the Martha Lee Cooking School. Since our delightful club luncheon at the hotel last spring I have frequently met school members either in the Statler dining room or the popular Cafe Rouge, or at some of the many women's club functions which are held in the Statler private parlor and dining room.

Quite the newest of these is the Salle Moderne, furnished completely in black and silver and chromed, last Friday by its opening banquet held by the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs.

The SKY RAIDER by COL. LINDBERGH'S FLYING AIDE Donald E. Keyhoe

A Thrilling Mystery Story of Love and Danger

What Has Happened So Far

Dick Trent, Air Mail Service, flies young Tommy Rand, stranded in a drinking haunt, home. Old Man Rand, owner of the line, thanks Dick. Mary Rand, beautiful daughter, is saved by Dick. Lawson, Dick's buddy, is missing. Dick comes across a burned plane and Lawson's dead body. A package containing $250,000 in government gold is missing. The only clue is a Luger pistol used to club Lawson's skull. Mary recognizes the pistol as her father's. Old Man Rand, questioned, admits giving the pistol to Lawson. He refuses, however, after talking to his son, Tommy, who has been missing again, to account for his actions during the early morning hours when the crime was committed. When the charred money bag is found in his own furnace Rand is arrested for the murder. Dick, with all the men in the service, is dejected. Mary, in hysterics, turns away from Dick, attributing her father's arrest to the pistol found by Dick.

Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER XIII

DICK was on the morning run. It was no longer unfamiliar or uncertain. He could look back, and recall that first night when he had flown to deliver a letter to Tommy Rand. He remembered the storm and its hazards, the perils through which he had slipped unscathed, by some befriending goddess of luck.

The route was familiar now. But as he flew it this frosty morning that bit his face with its chill and even fought through the sheep-lined coat to his bones, he might quite as well have been flying blind again.

His ship swept across the thin line of a railroad. Looking down, trying to banish his thoughts of Mary's accusation, of the father's ordeal, he saw a train chawling far beneath him.

How slowly it moved! And yet inside there were passengers with faces pressed against the windows who imagined themselves covering ground at the best possible speed. Unprogressive people, all of them alike people in the 19th Century England who permitted in using the stage-coach when the railroad had already as-"I came here to see Mr. Rand himself"—said Dick bluntly.

"Hello Dick," said Old Man Rand, and his voice sounded weak.

His Voice Was Weak as He Greeted Dick

Letters inside of it, and packages, an endless number. Letters from lover to lover, letters from mothers to sons, letters that carried on the business of the world, letters with cheques in them, letters with less welcome bills!

All speeding on their way. Trying to make time. And time—what was that but life? If you saved time, you saved life itself. The age of man had been increased some 10 years by scientific medical skill in the last century. Why, the age of man had been multiplied by the time-saving inventions that enabled him to live many lives in the space of one!

Dick thought of the mail in his own compartment that was now speeding on its way. The train had vanished. It was far behind. Flying as the crow flies, he was cutting down on distance as well as speeding pace. The writers who had trusted their missives to him were luckier than those who had sent them by that old-fashioned slow-coach method—the railroad train.

But these thoughts gave place at last to the more insistent ones that crowded his mind. Mary had said she hated him. In his heart there was no blame for her half-hysterical accusations, unreasonable though they were, for he knew the strain under which she was laboring.

But his mind hovered over the plight of Old Man Rand. He must be guilty—everything pointed that way. And yet somehow Dick could not bring himself to believe that that was so.

He tried to think of solutions to the problem, but his mind was baffled, and he gave up, as he had given up more than once in the past 24 hours. If only he could do something! If only there was something to do!

He made a landing at the destination airport before noon, gliding down toward the buildings that looked so tiny, and the field that lay stretched below him like a brown postage stamp.

His mail was received by the waiting truck; the familiar routine was unbroken. Dick reported at the office, strolled to the hangout, found everyone there discussing the Rand case. There had been no further clues. Nothing to disprove the evidence against Old Man Rand. The stolen money had not been located.

Why did he persist in thinking Old Man Rand innocent? Surely, it wasn't only affection or desire which caused that? Surely there must be some good reason for that conviction.

Dick Is Miserable Over Rebuff by Mary

And so, the heels of the thought there came an impulse. Half an hour later Dick had boarded a west-bound train for Markdown, the county seat. Before the afternoon was half-about he was in the prosecutor's office, where Hand was now waiting trial.

He had already heard the name of Hand's lawyer mentioned, at a time when no one [illegible] with such a calm method of face hatred [illegible] Dick had come to see Mr. Rand himself. I waited two days to see him.

The eldish lawyer looked thoughtful. That's not very important, of course, I could take care of "My name's Trent. I understand you're defending Mr. Rand."

You are Mr. Richard Trent, the flier who first found the pilot? He asked to see you. I received a letter to see only this morning. Why did you not come at once, by [illegible]? I could have had it later," said [illegible]. I came here

FAMOUS LAST WORDS

I thought the king had been played.

THE BAER FACTS -:- By 'BUGS' BAER

THE New York stagger plan is hitting on all sixes.

But the pedestrian starts out hitting on two and lands on one.

After looking over the traffic situation in Chicago, Richmond, Atlanta and the coast cities, we are convinced that a community center is a parking space entirely surrounded by dead lines.

Parking is now forbidden in New York and Paris. Lindbergh made his flight just in time.

A Kansas City man managed to reach his office yesterday in time to hang up an "Out to Lunch" sign.

But he had to put an ambulance gong on his bicycle to command respect.

Commissioner Grover Whalen of New York and by-products was seen dashing up Broadway in his one-passenger high hat.

Grover was singing that beautiful ballad, "In the gloaming."

Grover's version of it was, "In the gloaming, oh, my darling, when the lights are green and red."

Grover's stagger plan starts when the sun goes down and ends when the fuses blow out.

At twilight the pedestrians conject east and west while the automobiles jam north and south.

New York is leading other cities in its attempt to educate the dumb shoes of jay-walkers.

We would suggest that the plan could be accelerated by promoting some of the pedestrians to corporals.

A cop grabbed a man crossing Fifth ave. at an obtuse angle and yelled, "You're a jay-walker."

The man said: "Nope. I'm a file-closer."

Having been in the army himself in an effort to make the world safe from Dumbocracy, the cop saluted, pulled out a medal and decorated the citizen with the Croix de Street.

From now on everything is going to be all right if reckless chauffeurs can get over the idea that the village cemetery is the Sunday school picnic grounds.

A FAMOUS LOVE AFFAIR

By COZETTE DOUGLASS

FROM a poor orphan to reigning queen seems a far step, but one which actually was accomplished by the Empress Irene, wife of Leo IV, the Roman emperor.

Irene was a poor Athenian orphan, who at the age of 17 married Leo, then emperor of Constantinople. Her beauty was exquisite and she speedily gained the confidence and love of her feeble husband. On his death, which occurred in the year 780, she was left by him as the sole guardian of the empire to act as regent until her 10-year-old son, Constantine VI, became of age.

Then it was that she displayed the sagacity and firmness which have made her a figure in history.

Irene was an autocrat to her fingertips and her son early clashed under her despotic dictates. He attempted to free himself from her influence, but was frustrated and crushed by the troops of the empress, who demanded that the oath of fidelity should from that time be taken in her name alone.

Her ambition overcame her love, and at her sons constant evidences of wanting to throw off the yoke which she had placed on his shoulders she determined to get rid of him. Accordingly she ordered that he be seized and brought back to the palace at Constantinople, where at her orders his eyesight was destroyed. An eclipse of the sun took place at almost the identical time of this outrage and 17 days darkness thereafter were attributed to the anger of heaven at the crime. However, Irene still continued to reign for five years longer. She proposed to the Emperor Charlemagne, and according to some authorities, her proposal was accepted. The marriage, however, did not take place. The chancellor of the empire took it upon himself to break off the match and the empress was seized and banished.

It is said that the last days of her life were spent in poverty, as she was forced to earn a living by spinning. Some say that she was sent to a nunnery. However, she lived but a year after her downfall.

Her zeal in restoring to the church the images which had been banished, and her rebuilding of the monasteries which had been destroyed placed her high in the thoughts of the people, and she has been given a place among the saints of the Greek Church.

Perhaps not the sort of a romance romance one usually hears, but the story of the ambition which used love as a stepping stone to its goal, places it among the historic romances.

She must have been the possessor of a strong personality, whose dominating characteristics could not be denied. This is proven by the fact of her first step that of marrying the emperor, for even in those days when anything was liable to happen there was a wide gulf between the Athenian orphan and the emperor. Perhaps it was her beauty which attracted the emperor, in fact it must have been, for there was nothing else to warrant his attraction. And it does seem coincidental that her life ended as it began, in poverty and distress.

GRIFFITH TO BE EXECUTIVE OF U. A. FILMS

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.

Los Angeles, Jan. 28—Feeling in a rumoring mood, I'd better get the little hunch from David Wark Griffith out of my system. D. W., so tis whispered, has a new job with United Artists. He is in New York now with Joseph Schenck, and when both of them return from Manhattan 'tis said—noticed I use the qualifying phrase "'tis said"—that D. W. will occupy a big executive position.

That may be surprising to some folk who have known Mr. Griffith as a director who had to school himself constantly not to spend too much money. Statistics prove that his pictures have made more actual money than any other director in the business for the producer and that he shares in the profits. Statistics could also prove that D. W. today probably has less money than any other well-known director in the business. He is like a child about money.

But he has ideas, always had and always will have. And it is those ideas that he has passed on to Joseph Schenck that have induced the wise heads of United Artists to make D. W. an executive. Mind you, I may have talked out of school, but you know how it is when you hear a thing you just have to tell it. That comes of being a woman and a reporter.

You may take the word of Darryl Francis Zanuck, Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler herself that Al Jolson's leading woman in "Sonny Boy" will not be his bride. She will be—but wait just a moment, maybe I should say—she probably will be Georgia Hale, former leading woman of Charlie Chaplin. Georgia is the favorite now leading the race with Jean Arthur a close second.

Both girls have had tests made and both girls are regarded favorably by Mr. Jolson. There was some talk that Marian Nixon would be chosen by the black-face comedian, but Miss Nixon is playing the lead in "Headlines" at Warners' and unless there is a definite switch she is out of the running.

Norma Talmadge is rehearsing every day with Laura Hope Crews and with every rehearsal it looks more and more as if "Strictly Thru" will be her next picture with Gilbert Roland playing opposite her, but that doesn't mean by a long way that Channing Pollock's "Sign On The Door" is to be relegated to the waste heap and called a total loss.

Joseph Schenck owns the rights and what with talkies making those melodramas more and more popular no entertainment is going to be made but with an entirely different cast. I shouldn't be surprised to hear that a special production in a very few weeks now. Joseph Schenck and Norma Talmadge had telephone conversations over the possibility of making "Strictly Thru" and both of them are agreed that the dialogue it would make a charming talkie.

The sad and tragic fate of Barbara La Marr who was so often referred to as "the girl who was too beautiful, has unconsciously had its effect on all the girls in Hollywood who are classed as beautiful. Billie Dove, who has again and again been called the most beautiful woman in Hollywood, never considered that description a compliment. She wants more to be called a fine actress and she is working hard to achieve that aim. "The Cat and the Canary," especially for Forrest Halsey, gives her an opportunity to do some real acting. It is her first picture and will be directed by John Francis Dillon.

LOVE'S LABOR FOUND

THEIR FANCY TURNS TO LOVE

At any rate, Dorothy Mackaill and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., playing in "The Barker" at the Olympia and Fenway, seem concerned with a well-known subject.

By LEO GAFFNEY

Milton Sills, the screen's unfailing Frank Merriwell, has at last had his lonesome mate, peace and three-day growth of beard to emerge as the none too noble embodiment of Kenyons Nicholson's circus tough guy, "The Barker," on the Olympia and Fenway bill.

In the strictest of dialogue that occur at odd and dramatic moments, Sills reveals a booming baritone voice which proclaims "the wealth of carnival entertainment available to all and sundry "for a dime, the tenth part of a dollah!"

Among the major attractions of the "racket" is Betty Compson, flaunting her grass skirt of Hawaii for the edification of gaping multitudes. Another perennial "draw" is the Ziegfeldian Dorothy Mackaill, high-diving Venus of the tent show, resplendent in the unwrinkled cling of her one-piece bathing suit.

George Fitzmaurice, who directed, has done well by "The Barker," but not too well. His scenes are strikingly contrived and they all look like the real thing, but a general speeding up of the action and the elimination of some of the talk would do wonders.

The Barker's son, the boy who deserts school to join the show and fall victim to the high cost of charms, is played by Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. Neither he nor Miss Mackaill has as yet the necessary assurance before the microphone. Betty Compson's voice shrills a bit in the high notes, but Sills' voice is quite satisfactory. He talks, dresses, looks and acts like "Nifty Miller" himself, and while his performance is not up to the degree of excellence set by Walter Huston of the stage, nevertheless "The Barker" gives the husky star his best chance in two years, and he is not slow to appreciate it.

The production has not been stinted in the matter of excitement. There is a vigorous free-for-all when the warning cry of "Hey, rube," rings out over the carnival grounds to summon the valiant showmen to come out and battle the fractious yokels.

There are other Movietone and Vitaphone features at the Olympia and Fenway to complete the show.

Seek Woman Teacher in Boy, 17, Kidnaping

Ellisville, Ga., Jan. 28 (AP)—A search was in prospect today for Mrs. M. M. Wellons, 35-year-old school teacher, and Elwin Chapman, her 17-year-old pupil, following a formal charge of kidnaping lodged against the woman. Both disappeared Sunday a week ago.

The kidnaping warrant was sworn out by W. C. Chapman, father of the boy.

Broker in Plane Hops to Bedside of Father

St. Joseph, Mo., Jan. 28 (AP)—A plane carrying R. S. Strauss, New York broker, to the bedside of his father, Joseph Strauss, who is seriously ill here, arrived today.

The son hopped off from Curtiss field, New York. The condition of the elder Strauss was reported improved.

SUFFOLK A. O. H. TO GIVE BALL

Five thousand from 40 divisions of Suffolk County, Ancient Order of Hibernians, will gather in Hibernian building tomorrow night for the annual reception and ball. Gaelic and modern dancing will be the order of the evening with music furnished by O'Leary's Irish Minstrels.

County President Jeremiah J. Crowley is chairman of the committee.

Woman's Relief Corps to Meet

Massachusetts Woman's Relief Corps will hold its annual mid-winter conference in First Baptist Church, Clarendon st. and Commonwealth ave., Wednesday, February 13, at 10 a. m. Corps 88 will furnish lunch at noon. President Mrs. Celia E. McLeod and Mrs. Elizabeth Carroll have charge of lunch, with a group of aides to assist. This is the third year Corps 88 has undertaken this task.

Hold 2 in Slaying of Liner Purser

Manila, P. I., Jan. 28 (AP)—Gov.-Gen. Henry Stimson cabled the district attorney of San Francisco to detain an officer and a member of the crew of the steamer President McKinley for questioning concerning the killing of Allan McDaniels, assistant purser.

McDaniels, whose home was in Moscow, Idaho, was shot while sleeping aboard the ship, January 9. He died January 16.

WILKINS READY TO START FOR FALKLANDS

Deception Island Antarctica), Jan. 27, via Washer Hektoria and KUP—San Francisco Examiner Wireless Station)—Mild weather continues. The snow is now disappearing from these island more rapidly than has ever been known before and leaves many areas of dark volcanic soil uncovered.

These black expostures amid the mountains snow-topped with light gray clouds and mist, give the Antarctic the appearance of wearing mourning clouds—mourning perhaps the loss of secrets ravaged from her bosom by the airplane, the modern tool of man.

We shall soon leave these fields behind. On Monday or Tuesday, traveling on the Felrs, a boat-like transport type, we start for home, calling at the Falklands to board the Royal Mail packet Orduna.

Our route will be through the Magellan Straits and up the coast of South America. We should reach New York about the middle of March.

Our equipment is safely stored from wind and storm.

Geneva Association Plans Ball Tonight

Prominent city, State and hotel officials will attend the 25th annual ball of the International Geneva Association, scheduled for this evening in Paul Revere Hall.

Angelo Lippi
Pirnie Photo

The committee in charge, headed by Mario Bertolini and Angelo Lippi, presidents of the local branch and chairman of the entertainment committee, respectively, have completed an elaborate program, which includes the appearance of many talented artists, among them being Mickie Alpert and the entire revue of the Cocoanut Grove.

This organization is the largest of its kind, having been established in Geneva in 1877 and boasts of a membership of 22,000 members, and has 136 branches in this country.

Big Leader of Wolf Pack Escapes Guns, Poison

Merced, Cal., Jan. 28 (AP)—A ferocious wolf dog, leader of a large pack of dogs and coyotes in nocturnal raids on livestock, had vanished today after shotguns and poison had slain half his followers.

The "Hound of Silman," named from the ranch where he made his first raid on cattle, was believed to have retreated to his lair with his hungry pack.

Posses and ranchers, organized to kill the big dog leader, admitted failure in their hunt, but said they had killed more than twenty others.

A theory that the hound leader and other dogs were kept on the ranch of a man who turned the beasts loose nightly to ravage neighboring farms was being investigated by W. V. Sands, State predatory animal supervisor.

Mission Church Band in 28th Annual Play

A capacity house will greet the youthful Thespians of the Mission Church Field Band when they tramp the boards in St. Alphonsus Hall, Smith st., Roxbury, tonight. Their offering, a three-act comedy, "Making Money on Mushrooms," is the 28th annual production put on by the band.

BOSTON RADIO AMERICAN

FRED TOYE, RADIO EDITOR

VOICING THE GREAT DEMOCRACY OF THE AIR

RADIO NEEDS EMOTIONAL APPEAL

By FRED TOYE,
Radio Editor

WE ARE INFORMED by Mr Aylesworth of the National Broadcasting Co. that broadcasting, so far as his organization is concerned, is not a profitable enterprise. This statement can be broadened to take in almost the entire field of radio broadcasting. As it is constituted at present, the business of broadcasting programs of entertainment has not arrived at a state where it is equally attractive to the advertiser, pleasing to the listener and profitable to the station owner. This generalization does not apply, however, to the business of radio manufacturing. That industry is well stabilized and on a sound production and merchandising basis.

HUMAN PREFERENCES

THE CYNICAL will find reasons enough for the unprofitableness of radio broadcasting. Glaring faults in the technique of radio entertainment and in the use of radio broadcast advertising propaganda will be cited. I think the trouble lies deeper. On the whole, radio entertainment is good. On the whole radio advertising is discreet and inoffensive. I think the secret lies in human nature, in the preferences of the public.

NO VISUAL APPEAL

CONSPICUOUSLY popular are the movies, the talkies, the daily newspapers, the weekly and month ly magazines, the lighter forms of stage entertainment, such as musical comedy and vaudeville. What differentiates them from radio? It is obvious that radio attempts to take a little from every one of the forms of public amusement. Radio broadcasts is news, features, music, comedy. Up to the present, however, it has lacked one important advantage which obtains with the newspaper, the magazine, and the stage. It has not a visual appeal. We might say that radio lacks the well-known sex-appeal, and the statement would be partly true. But it lacks more than mere sex-appeal. Important as that is these days, it lacks power over any of the emotions.

A STRAIN ON GOOD NATURE

IT MAY BE TAKEN for granted fact that a Ziegfeld could present a more diverting vision than a hundred fiddlers, horn blowers, drummers and tambourine who make up the highly artistic mechanism of the modern symphony orchestra. The general public will never become wildly hysterical over the performances of symphony orchestras, string quartets, concert soloists and similar esthetic musicmakers. It is a strain upon the good nature of an audience to force it to sit for an hour or two gazing at the unlovely concert stage and its contents, solely for the esthetic pleasure which may come with the music performed Roxy sensed this when he gave classical music a lovely visual setting. The emotional eye was pleased, and the duller ear was transformed from an esthetic filter to an organ of sensuous delight. Now comes radio which has nothing of the sensual to appeal to the listener with,—not even in the way of dialogue. The very all-prevailing nature of radio makes it impossible to do and to say and to sing the things on radio which might be done or said or sung within four walls and which, directed at a definite, assembled audience would titillate the tympanum and start sly or solemn thoughts a-working.

EMOTION AND ESTHETICS

THE AVERAGE human is so constituted that his emotions are more easily excited by the scenes of sight and then by that of hearing. It could fairly well be claimed that the sense of hearing is the least emotional of our senses, and perhaps the most esthetic. True, esthetic sensibilities may be offended by such sounds. Such sibilities, however, have to do with esthetics, and are not inherent in human nature. Emotions are common to all mankind, and an industry, like radio, which concerns itself with esthetics and disregards the element of emotional hunger such as prevails in the extremely emotional American race, is doomed to satisfy but a small group of the public.

SOME FEATURES POPULAR

IT IS TRUE that radio has brought us many highly popular features of entertainment, and has proved itself a valuable instrument for the spread of information under certain conditions. The leaders of the industry should not be misled by this popularity, however. They should keep in mind that radio is popular in spite of many drawbacks. Certain features are popular because their origin in the air has had intelligence and imagination enough to supply elements to make up for the great lack of visual appeal. Roxy infects his personality into his broadcasts. The A. & P. Gypsies have created a definite atmosphere. The Eskimos have built another scene. The Empire Builders have hit upon something good. An Evening in Paris is of that sort. In the last main, the secret lies in a combination of good music plus accelerated tempo plus absence of noticeable waits. Many features which were good a few months ago are going stale. Columbia's logic and good opera broadcasts are typical. Such broadcasts have the advantage of novelty, and they will soon become tiresome. Dance orchestras confine the subject matter, a six-months moratorium. Country village scenes are worked to death, and the whole life of elements of comic which lies usually in the sight of bayseed clothes, chin whiskers and a chewed straw. How successful were Weber and Fields at the microphone, deprived of their famous makeup? How long did Moran and Mack survive?

FAN MAIL

PROOF that the radio has not the emotional appeal of movies or the stage or the printed and pictured word can be found in the mails. The public is not interested in radio personalities. Graham McNamee had a large following when radio was a novelty. But today the public is supremely indifferent to the individuals who are attempting to entertain them, except for an occasional performer, dragged in for guest appearances from the stage. Radio is no personalities of its own. The reason is that radio does nothing to stir the emotions. It has no Dempseys, no Clara Bows, no Babe Ruths, no Billy Sundays, no H. L. Menkens, no Arthur Brisbanes.

FLIGHTS and FLIERS

by George W. Hamblin

President Coolidge will have message made in New England today for breakfast tomorrow morning. If the plans of a "blimp" manufacturer in Lawrence go through. Skyways, inc., have been ordered to have a Stearman at their Lawrence airdrome, at noon today in order to take on a special shipment and fly to the capitol with it. So far as we know, this is the first time a local commercial flying concern has had an distinguished a task as furnishing transportation for the breakfast of the President.

Charlie Emerson flew the Monocoupe up to Portland Airport. The little ship will be on display at the automobile show that starts there today. Skyways also plans to exhibit a Stearman in the show.

Crocker Snow, accompanied by John D. Haughey, sales manager for the concern, left yesterday for the office staff, and Andrew Tvanoff, treasurer, flew up to Portland, today, to attend the opening day of the automobile show, and Elliott Payson, along. The Bellanca was used for the trip.

Local flying by Skyways for the past week was confined to photographic work and "joy hops." The weather was too poor for student work, and no cross-country flights were made.

Harold Moon, one of Skyways students, has just finished commercial exams, both the flying and written, and passed with flying colors.

Percy H. Spencer, formerly president of the New England Aircraft Corp. of Hartford, will shortly move to Boston to take over the reins of sales manager for the Curtiss Flying Service of New England, Inc. Spencer is well known to all the local boys, and his coming here will be received with cheers.

Boston's new mail pilot, who is replacing Ned Carrington who was killed taking the mail to New York, is "Hank" Hanley. He stands six feet three and a half inches in his stockinged feet. When he is sitting in a Bellanca it looks as though he were standing up, for his head and shoulders stick above the cowling. Hank and his altitude made immediate friends with the gang at the Airport.

THE QUESTION BOX

(Questions pertaining to commercial aviation will be answered in this column every Monday. Address your queries to Ned Bridgeport, R. I., Evening American, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass.)

Q.—Can you tell me who the airplane manufacturers are in New England? R. H. Boston. A.—Bourdon Aircraft Corp., Hillsgrove, R. I.; Keystone Aircraft Corp., Lowell. The Sikorsky Airplane Manufacturing Co. will be located at Bridgeport, R. I.

Q.—Do you need a high school education to take a flying course? Eddie, Dorchester. A.—No, you don't have to have a high school education. All you need is $300

Q.—In answer to B. H. S. of Dorchester—There has been some talk of building an airport in Medford but there was also talk about it some seven or eight years ago. Crocker Snow is now a first lieutenant in the National Guard Olcott Payson has received his transport license.

RADIO RIB TICKLERS

WCAU—There's a punch to this one sent in by Frank Skomersky of Everett:

"Sleet: We've busted into the house of the new heavyweight champion. Let's beat it, quick."

"Aw, don't be afraid. He won't fight for less than a million dollars."

WGY—Arlene Neff of Pittsfield learned some astronomy with this one:

"Have you ever studied astronomy?"

"Why, yes."

"Name an important star."

"That's easy. Rin-Tin-Tan."

"Oh, yes. That's the dog star."

Send in to the Boston Evening American Radio Department the best joke and amusing incidents which you hear over the radio. For every contribution printed a prize of one dollar will be sent to the writer.

BOSTON SUNDAY EVENING AMERICAN

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

Country Is Watching

If Senate Mutilates Honest Navy Replacement Bill, Voters Should Scrap Disloyal Republican Senators

With the urgent Deficiency Bill out of the way the Naval Replacement Bill again becomes the unfinished business of the Senate.

And the American people will know within a week whether the Republican leaders of the Senate are going to put up a real fight to pass that bill in the form that it passed the House, or whether they are merely going to wage a sham battle in its behalf.

As it passed the House at the last session by a vote of more than five to one, this bill authorized the Navy Department to begin building within the next three years fifteen 10,000-ton cruisers and one aircraft carrier to take the place of ships long since obsolete.

An attempt will be made in the Senate to amend this bill by striking out the time clause and reducing the number of cruisers authorized from fifteen to ten.

To adopt this amendment would not only overwhelmingly defeat the will of the House but it would substitute a DISHONEST measure for an honest measure.

And the purpose of such substitution could only be to DECEIVE the American people and afford new opportunity for the party in power to continue the GAME of politics it has been playing with the Navy for the last eight years.

Therefore, now is the time for every unconditional American who believes that this country is entitled to equality with the British upon the seas to keep his eye upon his two Senators in Congress.

That the British fleet is superior to the American fleet today is beyond question.

That the Hughes Naval Treaty of 1922 fixed equality with the British fleet as our future naval policy is beyond question.

That the Hughes Naval Treaty could never have been ratified without the assurance to the nation that in giving up superiority on the seas the United States would get for its future ABSOLUTE EQUALITY with the British, is beyond question.

That even the authorization and prompt construction of all the fifteen new cruisers for which the pending bill provides would still leave the United States BELOW equality with the British in cruisers mounting guns over six-inch calibre, is beyond question.

But what is still an open question is whether the Republican leaders of the Senate are going to put up a REAL FIGHT for the pending bill as it passed the House, time clause and all, or only continue to make the Navy the victim of the game of partisan politics which this party has been playing ever since it entered power in 1921.

In other words, the open question now before the Senate is whether the Republican leaders in Congress are going to support the established naval policy of equality with the British, or whether they are going to scrap it.

If they are going to support it, they will pass the pending bill in the form that it passed the House. If they are going to scrap it, they will mutilate that bill by cutting out the time clause and cutting down the number of cruisers for which it provides.

IN WHICH CASE THE VOTERS SHOULD SCRAP THE DISLOYAL REPUBLICAN SENATORS AND PUT THE CONTROL OF THE SENATE IN MORE PATRIOTIC HANDS.

Day by Day Abroad

O.O. McINTYRE

PARIS, Jan. 28—Among myriad provocative mysteries of Paris, the greatest to me is how its incessant swarm of taxis keep going. They scurry and flit with their honk, squeak, honk, like a giant plague of crickets. Step to the curb, raise a hand, and they almost fly on you.

Down the middle of every boulevard they wait four abreast, and in crowded centers are a foot apart along the curbs. In the most deserted street only wait a minute and an empty taxi is bound to zip by. Sometimes they seem to pop out of the sewers. And some smell as though they had.

One may forget in time the city's architectural grandeur, spreading arches and exquisite gardens, but never the flood of tiny taxis. They are cheaper here than any place else on the globe, starting mostly at a franc, less than four cents, and progressing at penny taximeter jumps. And leap is the word.

An afternoon shopping expedition with all the waits and a pleasant drive through the Bois will not, including a generous tip, exceed 50 francs, less than $2. With few exceptions, all are tiny, ancient, broken down and nailed up contraptions, rented by drivers from agencies at 50 francs a day—gasoline extra.

Mostly they are driven by insolent petty brigands—Russians with cold black eyes and dead-leaf faces, or typical tubby Frenchmen with peach-pink cheeks and eyebrows like feathers, resembling for all the world overgrown kewpies. All are old save for the occasional left-over American doughboy.

The Paris taxi driver is rarely a dangerous criminal. He serves the police somewhat as does our "stool pigeon" and in exchange is permitted his minor gypping. He is no fuddled with red wine most of the time, and despite the hilariously cock-eyed traffic rules is seldom in an accident.

He must work, when he works, like fury, to pay for the rent of his cab, yet he is the most independent of all extremely independent workers of Paris. Between the hours of 12 noon and 2 p. m. and 7 and 8 p. m. you cannot engage him. During those hours he is stocking up on garlic and cheese and swigging wine.

BUT France's best chuckle is still its telephones. The service annoys Americans most. They are accustomed to first-class service, while the British are accustomed to whatever they can get. Today, by actual clocking, an hour was required getting a number within a few blocks of the hotel. That gives you a sketchy idea.

AMERICANS who go broke in Paris quite naturally hunt for the well known expedient at home—the pawnshop. But there aren't any. The law against them is rigid. A private citizen may not even advance money on an article offered by another. All pawnshops are under municipal control—the Credit Municipal—and are open one day each month in the various arrondissements. Then only one-tenth of the value of an article is offered.

MANY years ago a London journalist pointed out a famous cocotte who nightly patrolled the Grands Boulevards—a one-legged slip of a girl weaving her way in and out the throngs gracefully on white enameled crutches. Since then I have always watched for her, and not until my last visit was she missed. But last night in front of Le Matin I saw her again—now stout with an unhealthy bloat, but still pursuing the oldest calling.

PARIS has little to offer in plays. The New York stage is far more important, exciting and alive. The best liked revue is called "Charles Lindbergh," and it smacks of our Follies of ten years ago, with the inevitable scenic view of Broadway at night. The youth who plays Lindbergh is such a close likeness that resemblance is startling and people often follow him on the boulevards.

A JOINT cable collect from Will Hogg and Irvin Cobb in Buenos Aires reads: "Restaurant named for you here—Cafe Coccon." As though I'm not used to long distance insults. And what a you know spot to pick out for a collect cable!

ALSO a post card from the Swiss Family O'Malley's—per Frank Ward—and their Alpine chamois hound, now at Vevay, Switzerland. A hearty welcome from Billy Decheck, the Berry Good cartoonist, living far from Broadway at St. Raphael. And merry telephone buzzes from Ralph Barton, Michael Arlen, Erskine Gwynne and Henri Letellier.

The Spoiled Wife

She Needs a Washtub

GUESS WHAT THIS LADY IS SAYING

This picture, reproduced from that sprightly little publication, "The New Yorker," which must be all tired out from being funny all the time, shows the modern SPOILED wife.

She is saying, as she tears her pretty hair, lifts her large eyes to heaven, pitying herself:

"You are so kind to me, and I am so tired of it all."

You may not realize it, but, sad to relate, hard to believe, and otherwise deplorable, is the fact that this picture is NO exaggeration.

There are thousands of wives just as much spoiled as this one, thousands of poor, placid, puzzled husbands that go on taking things as they come, satisfied with the well paid doctor's statement, "You do not UNDERSTAND your dear wife's highly nervous, refined, sensitive temperament."

An unfortunate "Big Butter and Egg Man," or Wall Street speculator, or automobile producer, or what not, husband, may not be everything that the lady's fancy could imagine. He is different from the tenor they have just heard singing at the opera; different from the young gigolo gentleman, recently tripping the light fantastic before her eyes on the cabaret floor.

The husband, with the worried expression and the big dough bag, has ALL sorts of defects, doubtless. But, after all, she married him.

And what SHE needs is a cookstove and a washtub, a w[illegible]board, and the soiled linen of about eight children and [illegible]sband working on the railroad.

She wouldn't be "so tired of it all" if she had a job [illegible] would make her REALLY TIRED.

And that's what many rich and foolish wives need.

Rich, and ten times MORE foolish husbands, please take [illegible] of it.

About the Winter Stars

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

AS we face southward in the middle of a winter evening the huge dark bulk of the earth under the North Star behind us hides the gleaming center of the Milky Way universe to which we belong, an amazing capital of stars so remote that its infinite multitude of lights throws only a glow upon the background of space.

But in comparison we behold above the southern horizon the most brilliant assemblage of nearest stars that the sky anywhere presents to the eyes of this world. It must have been the recollection of this sight which left the Psalmist to write that "the heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament sheweth his handiwork."

It is a daunting sight to one who knows how little a thing the earth is and how humble the sun amidst the blazing array of his superiors. But, in the feeble grasp of our minds, tired with straining to comprehend uncovered immensity, these mighty suns become flashing and sparkling jewels scattered on the velvet counter of the night.

There high aloft near the meridian glitter the Pleiades, a plume of clustered diamonds fit for the queen of heaven.

Below the Pleiades, to the east, burns Aldebaran with the hues of a flaming apple-blossom. Its color is unique among the stars and a world illuminated by its rays would glow forever in a rosy fingered dawn.

Above is white Capella, pinning the northern hem of the glimmery scarf of the galaxy, and below to the left shines great Orion, attended by his stellar magnificos, Betelgeuse and Rigel, and with his matchless sword-belt of triple mater stars.

"Whose keen not him in cloudless night
Gleaming aloft shall cast his eyes in vain
To find a brighter sign in all the heavens."

The bright white star Rigel, at the southwest corner of the quadrilateral figure outlining the constellation Orion, may be the greatest of all known suns in the universe; at any rate, it is probably 18,000 time more luminous than our sun! If it took the place of our sun the planets would be shrivelled into cinders.

Its reddish rival beyond the upper side of the three-starred belt is Betelgueuse, the first star to have its diameter directly measured—30,000 times as great as the sun's diameter.

Below the belt hangs a hazy object which a telescope magnifies into the strange luminous cloud called the Orion Nebula. But the whole constellation is involved in nebulous matter. It looks like one of nature's greatest sun-foundries. The modern doctrine is that these diffuse nebulae shine by excitation from the stars embedded in them.

The most brilliant individual object in the sky is found by drawing an imaginary line through the three belt stars and continuing it far toward the southeast. It is Sirius, the "dog-star." The real hue of its light is a slightly bluish white, but when the air is a little unsteady it flashes all the colors of the rainbow. Sirius is hundreds of times fainter in reality than Rigel, which has the same color, yet it looks much brighter than Rigel, because Rigel's distance is over sixty times that of Sirius and its apparent brightness is proportioned inversely to the square of the distance.

The bright star Procyon, higher than Sirius and east of Orion, is another first magnitude winter gem, and still higher appear the twins, Castor and Pollux, in the constellation Gemini, which is the celestial palace of the mid-summer sun. Earth has no fairer sight than these regal stars in and around Orion scintillating on a sparkling winter night above a snowy landscape.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Come, follow me, and leave the world to its babblings. —Dante.

The damps of autumn sink into the leaves and prepare them for the necessity of their fall; and thus insensibly are we, as years close around us, detached from our tenacity of life by the gentle pressure of recorded sorrow.—Landor.

Genius is the introduction of a new element into the intellectual universe. —Wordsworth.

Where law ends tyranny begins —Pitt.

Bad will be the day for every man when he becomes absolutely contented with the life that he is living, with the thoughts that he is thinking, and with the deeds that he is doing. —Phillips Brooks.

I congratulate poor young men upon being born to that ancient and honorable degree which renders it necessary that they should devote themselves to hard work. —Carnegie.

New opinions are always suspected, and usually opposed, without any other reason, but because they are not already common. —Locke.

However dull a woman may be, she will understand all there is to love; however intelligent a man may be, he will never know but half of it. —Fox.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

THOUSANDS of unhappy married couples bring their problems to this office every year and one cause is responsible for nearly all their troubles.

This cause is NOT unfaithfulness nor cruelty nor any of the commonly accepted reasons for marital unhappiness. It is simply DISHONESTY.

Love provides more delights than any other human experience—it also provokes more lies.

We meet—we are attracted—hence we make every effort to sustain that attraction. We stop Being Ourselves—we try to be the person which we imagine our loved one wishes us to be.

Agnes, who is a business woman to the roots of her being, pretends to adore housework. Fred, who is a born gypsy, pretends to have a passion for banking.

Filled with romantic enthusiasm they lie gloriously to each other, and their marital partnership begins under the glamor of those fairy tales.

They're sincere. Agnes honestly believes that she will develop a love of housework. Fred honestly intends to become a good banker. But presently Agnes is longing for her old job and stacking the breakfast dishes, and Fred is letting the accounts slide while he dreams of hiking through Yellowstone.

They both grow bored, rebellious. They both feel tricked and trapped.

"I thought you said you were a swell housekeeper," sneers Fred.

"And I thought you wanted to have a regular home 'n' everything," snaps Agnes.

The old lies rise up and bring them to judgment. Their happiness is wrecked. They part. The split was inevitable. But it wouldn't have been inevitable if they had faced and discussed the truth about themselves. If Agnes had been honest about her hunger for office, and if Fred had been honest about his gypsy trails, they might have arrived at a working compromise which would have satisfied both their natures. But instead they lied and cheated themselves and each other.

There is a certain, peculiar Truth for each one of us. That Truth can't be denied. It is built into our characters as our bones are built into our bodies. It is the product of our early training and environment, our physical inheritance, our glandular structure—all that has gone to the making of our physical and mental life. For a time that Truth may be evaded. Under the excitement of love or anger or curiosity we may undertake ventures which are alien to our spirits. But sooner or later we come back to our real selves. And as we have denied those real selves, we must pay a heavy penalty.

Face the Truth about yourself. Study the terms and conditions which govern your life. Before you enter into any kind of a partnership, state your terms. State the peculiar needs of YOUR NATURE.

DON'T BE AFRAID TO STATE THOSE NEEDS. YOU HAVE AS MUCH RIGHT TO BE YOU AS HE HAS A RIGHT TO BE HE.

If by stating your terms you lose love, you'll lose it anyway. For though you may remain dumb concerning the Truth about yourself, life will not remain dumb. Sooner or later you'll have to BE Yourself. You'll find it far better to Be Yourself right from the start.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE usual "misunderstanding" starts with the first kiss, which the girl regards as "just the beginning"—and the man regards as the beginning of the end.

Love is a sentimental "jag." The remorse and the headaches may follow, but while the glamour lasts, you say and think sublime things that would never occur to you when cold sober.

Those must have been dull days, before prohibition, when "ladies" never drank cocktails, much less went in for spangled cocktail jackets and jeweled flasks.

It is hard to say which suffers more on a legal holiday; the woman whose husband hangs around the home and makes trouble and criticisms, or the woman whose husband goes out and makes big whoopee.

To a man, a decade is just ten years—but to a woman it is the gulf between youth and henna.

Nowadays the average girl has no more regard for a wife's proprietary rights in her husband than the average laundry has for the personal ownership of handkerchiefs.

When a man runs away from temptation in his twenties it is pretty safe to predict that at forty he'll be hanging back waiting for temptation to OVERTAKE him.

The kitchens of the world are wet with the tears of young wives whose enthusiasm for cooking has been quenched forever by a scornful sniff.

Funny how all a married man's graceful gallantry to women suddenly subsides the moment his wife divorces him and puts him back into circulation!

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

NO miracle is greater than belief, that hidden sense which dwells somewhere within man's inner self, untroubled by his grief, unvexed by critics and unstained by sin. For through belief stupendous things are done; where it has flourished free from doubt's dark taint, life has grown fairer, flowerlike, towards the sun; its force has changed a sinner to a saint. Belief has urged earth's conquerors always from triumph on to triumph greater still; its torchlike glow has fired dark nights, dim days with vaster share of courage and of will. Believe! Your wondering eyes will see the thing for which you longed to [illegible] vital being springs
